

Lebanon Holstein Holds Field Day

UPPER LAWN (Lebanon Co.) — The Lebanon County Holstein Club held its annual field day at the farm of George and Carol Ungemach, located in southwestern Lebanon County.

For years the Ungemach family has been active in the county Holstein club and the children have been active in 4-H and FFA projects and programs. They milk from 80 to 85 registered and grade Holsteins in a free-stall with pumped manure storage.

About 275 people attended the evening event held late last week. Many participated in the judging contest.

Guest speaker was David Rama, cattle merchandiser with the Cattle Exchange, who is well known for his work with some major sales and dispersals.

There were also photo and information displays of the breeding and genetics represented in five different county herds.

The judging contest consisted of three classes of Holsteins, and, as a tie-breaker, a class of milking goats.

The Holstein classes consisted of a junior heifer calf class, 2-year-old cows, and a dam and daughter class.

Contest winners among the youths, aged 13 and younger were Holly Meyer, first; Aaron Hoover, second; and a tie for third between Jake Mase and Brad Hoover.

Among the youths aged 14 to 18 years old, the winner was Jeremy Troutman, followed by Melonica Kauffman for second and three-way tie for third between Dannette Nolt, Scott Nolt, and Sandy Gross.

In the men's division, the first place judge was Pat Arnold, followed by Harry Bachman, and a tie for third between Mike Fair and Dale Hostetter.

Sharon Arnold led the women's division, followed by Stephanie Wagner, second, and Lois Meyer at third.

The Lebanon Holstein also has several activities on its calendar. The club also had scheduled to hold its annual county sale at the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds Friday night, after presstime.

And according to club secretary Bruce Bollinger, the club's annual
