

NDB Builds Plans Around Priorities

board approved plans to continue in-store, food service and trade education programs for cheese in Japan and Mexico to help increase U.S. sales.

Milkfat

The board approved funding research projects with the intent of finding increased value and uses for surplus milkfat. In one project, researchers will develop emulsifiers from milkfat. Emulsifiers originating from milkfat may offer unique benefits in both food and non-food products. Researchers will look for applications for milkfat emulsifiers in commercial products like low fat ice cream and skin lotions.

Recent research findings confirm that efficient removal of fat from whey protein concentrate (WPC) improves both its functionality and flavor stability. Researchers will attempt to identify some unique properties and determine the potential value of fat isolated from whey as a food product ingredient.

In another milkfat project approved by the board, researchers will try to standardize the output from a new method for separating milkfat into specific fractions. These researchers have already learned to extract a fraction of milkfat which contains the rich dairy flavor. They will now separate and find uses for other milkfat fractions.

Dairy Image

National Dairy Board members decided to work with the National Dairy Council to participate in and communicate findings from a National Institutes of Health conference to be held next spring. The conference will have a focus on the role of calcium from dairy products in women's health, especially prevention of osteoporosis. This conference may provide credible, third party endorsements supporting the health benefits for calcium and dairy products in the diet which can be disseminated to the public.

The board approved two nutrition research projects which could help protect and build the image of dairy products if findings are favorable. Recent accusations tried to link drinking milk with increasing risk to diabetes. Scientists have not confirmed this accusation, so researchers will try to prove milk is not the cause while finding other factors, unrelated to milk protein, which are more likely to cause the disease.

In another study, researchers will attempt to find ways to collect large quantities of a new vitamin, PQQ, from whey. PQQ, found in large amounts in milk, is a potent antioxidant. Antioxidants are believed to help prevent several chronic degenerative diseases like heart disease and cancer. By extracting quantities of it, PQQ can be tested by scientists to prove its benefit to health. Such studies may discover more reasons to use dairy products.

In other National Dairy Board business, the 36 dairy farmer board:

- approved plans to promote U.S. yogurt and ice cream in Mexico and U.S. ice cream in Japan;
- voted to join the Meat Export Federation and the Miller's National Federation in sponsoring a trade mission for Egyptian officials to learn about U.S. grading standards and plant inspections.

DHIA Services Reorganizes

COLUMBUS, Ohio — DHIA Services, the commercial subsidiary of the National Dairy Herd Improvement Association, recently announced its new slate of officers for 1993-1994. Terry Ellingson, dairyman, Poplar Grove, Illinois serves as Chairman; Bill VerBoort, general manager, California DHIA, Fresno, Vice Chairman; and Doug Runyon, dairyman, Kopperl, Texas, Secretary/Treasurer.

Newly appointed to the board is Nelvin Empet, general manager of Northeast DHIA, Ithaca, New York. Empet has been General Manager of Northeast DHIA for 16 years, expanding Northeast's coverage to include six states. Innovations released under his direction include the Day One System, a reference standards laboratory, and a marketing agreement for herd management software and technology.

Continuing their terms on the board are Al Thelen, general manager, Michigan DHIA, Lansing; and Richard Nichols, dairyman, Canyon City, Colorado. DHIA Services, which offers milk meters and other performance-related products, has experienced an average growth over the last three years of 24 percent.
