

Improve the Energy Efficiency Of Windows

DOVER, Del. — With the temperatures outside dropping and fuel prices rising, the efficient use of energy is very important. By improving the efficiency of your home or office and thus, reducing energy waste, you will reduce your utility costs, as well as help offset price increases.

Windows are an essential feature of homes, apartments and most offices. They provide ventilation and natural light, as well as give a feeling of openness and space to our living areas. However, windows can account for 10 to 25 percent of a home's heat loss in winter and can also produce unwanted heat gain in summer.

Like any other part of your home, windows require maintenance.

To enjoy their useful functions and minimize inefficiency, it is important to control unwanted heat losses and gains.

By implementing certain measures such as caulking, weathers-tripping, using moveable insulation, and adding storm windows, you can lower your utility bills and improve your comfort level.

The fact sheet — "Improving the Energy Efficiency of Windows" — explains how to make your windows more efficient.
