Farm Tour Looks At Herbicides, Varieties

SPRINGVILLE (Lancaster Co.)—On Wednesday, nearly 150 Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service, Inc. (BACS) customers attended the first annual public field day and tour at the BACS Research Farm at the Hibshman Homestead.

The purpose of the field day, according to Mike Brubaker, BACS president, was to showcase new products and to tour the other research plots, including variety trials (corn grain, corn silage, double-cropped soybeans, and alfalfa), replicated pesticide trials, and a fertility trial.

In conjunction with the BACS research tour was Monsanto's Sneak Preview Plot Tour, designed to show growers and dealers what Monsanto products are currently on the market.

Jeff Vance, market manager for Monsanto, said the trials allow farmers to see how the products work on an actual basis and to gather information on how to use those products.

A portion of the Monsanto tour was to provide information to farmers on a new premix available for crops in 1995.
