

Ag Progress

Chad, 4, children of Albert and Lisa Dreibellis.

The Dreibellis children were not alone. Almost every child who was asked what they enjoyed most about their visit to Ag Progress answered, "sitting on the tractors!"

The three-day annual event is free, and offers one of the biggest selection of tractors you'll ever find. So, if you did not attend Ag Progress this year, make sure you tell you your parents to plan to attend next year. It is held annually the third week in August at Rockspring in Centre County.

Intrigued with watching bees make honey are Katy Hoover, 7; Madelyn Hoover, 5; and Katie Rancik, 6. The Hoovers are the children of Scott and Sandy Hoover from Spring Grove. Katie is the daughter of Lori and Mike Rancik from Wriglesworth Knob Farm in Gramplan, Clearfield County.

Jan Kinney

These boys stop to pick up an "I love milk" sticker handed out by Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association.

Ricky Klein, 6, finds turning a grain mill intriguing work. The son of Kevin and Cathy Klein of State College examines the implements used in agriculture before electrical and gas-powered equipment was used.
