Dairy Stakeholders Meet To Plan Next Forum

ting tools and interaction of the seminar participants.

The second result of the first forum has been the organization of a professional dairy farm managers kills. To date, the group is small and loosely organized. But plans call for expansion of the group as direction is established.

Since the objective of the original Pennsylvania Dairy Industry Future Committee was to encompass the entire dairy industry from farm to consumer, suggestions for the second forum indicate the need to focus on consumer needs and the limits that may prevent manufacturing plants and distribution systems to function in the Commonwealth. The final direction of the forum is still to be decided, but it can be said that everyone agreed the forum must conclude with action goals for the next year or there will be no third forum. Work is being done to arrange the forum at the same time the new dairy research facility at Penn State is dedicated.

Various topics were discussed at the planning meeting this week, all related to the concern that the dairy industry may not remain a viable group to exchange ideas and deve- enterprise in Pennsylvania even in the near future.

> Of course, the usual concerns about the diminishing number of farms and the cost/price squeeze to the farmer were expressed. The old line about producers becoming more efficient has about run its course in many farmers' minds. Many believe they are already about as efficient as they can get.

But the concern reaches deep into the distribution chain as well. Right now, a major supermarket chain is faced with changing state regulations that may force it to buy milk outside of Pennsylvania to meet competition.

Many such questions remain: "Why can supermarket chains buy milk cheaper outside of Pennsylvania?.

· "Why don't manufacturing plants want to build in Pennsylvania?' · "Who speaks for Pennsylvania's dairy industry when a united voice is necessary to attract industry or develop markets?"

In the end, there was a lot of impatience with just talking. It's time for action to bring all segments of the dairy industry and maybe even other enterprises into a united front for Pennsylvania agriculture. Action! Now! Immediately!

And the next action will be a forum in June at Penn State to decide what next action to take.
