

Farm Link Helps Forge First Connection

LYCIPPUS (Westmoreland Co.) — Charles Brosius, Pennsylvania's agriculture secretary, visited Monday in Lycippus with Thomas Hunt and Stephen Whitling, the first retiring and beginning farmer to be linked in the state's newest program designed to help promote and sustain family farming, Pennsylvania Farm Link.

Presenting the new farmer, Steven Whitting, with a Holstein dairy calf Brosius said, "It is a special pleasure to be here today to participate in this historic occasion that marks the beginning of a new way to ensure the long term viability of Pennsylvania agriculture."

Wishing them both the best of success in keeping the farm profitable and productive, Brosius said Hunt and Whitting were true pioneers in an effort that is vital to our future.

Whitting met Hunt at a Farm

Link workshop in Greensburg in March and after several get-togethers forged a deal to gradually transfer the Hunt farm.

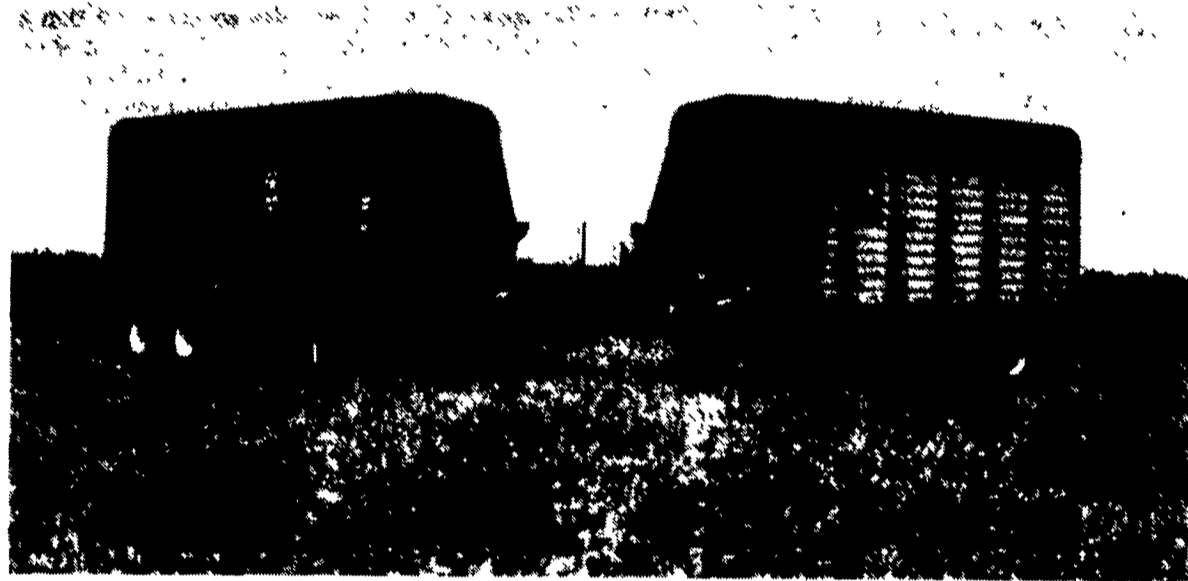

Hunt's arthritis is so bad he had been looking for years to find someone to take over his dairy farm. Under the agreement, which the men plan to renew annually, Whitting provides most of the labor to run the 100-acre farm in Westmoreland County, while Hunt offers expertise and housing.
