

South Central 4-H District Dairy Show Selects Champions

In the Brown Swiss show, Miller selected senior 3-year-old Meadow Hill Jade Alice, bred and owned by Alicia Ann Mase of Lebanon as the senior and grand champion.

In late July, Alicia showed her cow to win grand champion of its breed at the Lebanon Area Fair. It also went on to win the title of supreme champion dairy animal among the youth shows there.

For reserve senior and grand champion Brown Swiss, Miller selected another senior 3-year-old, Lake Lane Pebbles, owned by Joshua Hushon of Delta.

Hushon also showed the junior champion Brown Swiss, a junior yearling, Brothers Three Snowflake. It was bred and owned by Hushon.

The reserve junior champion Brown Swiss was also a junior yearling, Quaker-Haven Patrick Queen, shown by Aaron Cornman of Carlisle.

In the Jersey show, Heffner said that all dairy cattle breeders in the region should be proud of the quality of the animals selected for grand and reserve grand champion. He said that they have the potential "to really go somewhere. You should be proud, all of you, of the quality of (the champions)."

He named a senior 3-year-old, Mel-O-Dawn Boomer Budlight, owned and bred by Cory Mellot, of Mercersburg, as the senior and grand champion.

A junior 3-year-old, Justa-Beauty GM Jeannette, owned and bred by Rebecca Cornman, of Carlisle, was named reserve senior and reserve grand champion.

Heffner selected a senior calf, Pleasant Valley Design Sassy, owned by Kelly Rotz of Newville as the junior champion. An intermediate calf, Pleasant Valley Jay Design, owned by Rachel Oliver of Greencastle was named reserve junior champion.

In the Guernsey show, Heffner selected a junior 2-year-old, King & Queen Sheldon Violet, owned and bred by Brian Thomas Smith, of Denver, as the senior and grand champion.

Heffner also praised Smith's showmanship, citing an obvious relationship between showman and show animal that signified a lot of time spent working together.

Two of the four senior age class champions were shown by Smith, with his sister Elizabeth helping as leadsman for his 4-year-old cow. Heffner said he asked Brian which of the two were better, and that Brian said Violet, and Heffner said he agreed.

Andrew Ebersole, of Annville, showed the reserve senior and reserve grand champion Guernsey, a senior 3-year-old, Cedar Fringed Chancer.

Heffner selected a pair of senior calves as his junior and reserve junior champions.
