

104th Cambria County Auction

hogs, dairy, market lambs, veal, baby beef, and horses.

A new "ag" feature at this year's fair was the "Hay Stacking Contest." This was sponsored by the Cambria County 4-H Livestock Committee. It was a timed event with a number of teams competing. Each team consisted of three members, with at least one female participant, one 4-H member or 4-H parent, family member, leader or committee member. The main objectives of the hay-stacking contest was to provide some diversity and activity that youth could participate in and to keep alive the tradition of handling small square bales.

Mary Beyer, with sons Dan (left), and Joe, of Sidman, R.D. "show off" some of their fair entries. The Beyer family has been bringing items to the Cambria County Fair for approximately 15 years and have won countless red and blue ribbons over the years. Dan won a blue ribbon at the 1984 fair for the "biggest pepper" and hopes that some of this year's entries are blue ribbon winners!

Dan Gooderham, age 17, of Chest Springs, is entering the fair for the first time with his steer "Eddie." Dan is the son of John and Mary Yahner. Note: Dan's steer was a second-place winner in its weight class.

Kelly Conrad of Ebensburg, and Amanda and Jeadlah Baker, of Loretto with the rabbits that they have entered in the fair. Kelly is a member of the Blacklick Valley 4-H Rabbit Club and this will be her final 4-H fair entry. Amanda belongs to the Misty Hollow 4-H Rabbit Club and this is the first time she has entered the fair.
