ANSWER — L. Hoover, Denver, wanted to know why her gladiolus turned a moldy brown before they opened. Most were newly purchased bulbs. If the bulbs are saved, will they do the same thing next year? Thanks to Minnie Stauffer who writes that she had the same experience with newly purchased bulbs, which spread it to 1,400 bulbs. The county extension agent said that thrips were causing the problem. You cannot see thrips but they work inside the bulb and plant.

Last fall, they mixed Diazinon Insect Spray with water, dipped the bulbs into that, and spread them to dry on the barn floor.

When dry and ready for storage, the bulbs were dusted with bulb dust and put away for the winter.

This summer, after they were eight inches high, the bulbs were sprayed about every 10 days with Diazinon. There were still cases of it, but it was kept under control.
