Also Bud Dean bought Allison Hughes lamb for $1.90 per pound and donated it back to be resold for the County livestock judging team's travel expense and Dr. Darci Stolz, Strasburg bought the lamb for $1.85 or $196.10 credited to the fund.

Old-Time Hay Machinery Focus Of Show

ARCADIA, Md. — Hay tools and equipment became the focus of the 40th annual Maryland Steam Historical Society Show held here recently, with the theme, "Make Hay While The Sun Shines."

This year's show had the "finest collection of hay tools and equipment ever assembled anywhere," said Robert Rauhauser, hay tool collector from Thomasville, Pa.

Rauhauser said the show experience was "like stepping back in time" and featured a variety of tools. They ranged from a handoperated hay press to a one-horse sweep hay press to a stationary baler to a kicker baler to a large round baler.

Included were a collection of Carol Young, Weaver's Insurance, Quarryville, bought Tiffany Dean's champion 4-H market lamb. Shannon Noecker, fair queen presented awards.

Floyd Hess, Hess' Catering, Willow Street, bought Klinton Frey's champion FFA hog. Shannon Noecker, fair queen, presented awards.

Dale Livengood's champion 4-H steer was sold to H. C. Reineer, Strasburg.

Matt Welk, Welkcrest Holsteins, Strasburg, center, bought Vince Metzler's FFA champion market lamb. Shannon Noecker, fair queen presented the award.

From left, Shannon Noecker, fair queen, and Creig Campbell, Eric Lindberg, and John Tomlinson, all from Hoss' Steak and Sea House, bought Allison Hughes champion 4-H market lamb. haymow forks, hay track carriers (some made that didn't have four wheels and slid on a wooden track), hay knives, safety grapples, swivel rope hooks, a hay load binder, and other items.

There were more than 20 collectors displaying from Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, and Pennsylvania.

One exhibitor, Olin Pryor, Martinsburg, W.Va., is the owner of a hone-horse sweep hay press on display. Rauhauser, Thomasville, Pa., believes his own handoperated hay press was manufactured before the Civil War.

Robert Schwab, Hagerstown Md., and Earl Rohrbaugh, Glen Rock, Pa., enjoyed showing and explaining how their mower knife grinders worked.

Rauhauser said, "I like to listen to all the old timers about their haying experiences. Most were hardships that happened because making hay was the hardest, hottest, dirtiest job on the farm back in those days."

Most enjoyable was listening to stories and sharing a few good laughs about the trouble and hard work making hay used to be, according to Rauhauser.

Next year, the Maryland Steam Historical Society will be featuring the dairy business. Anyone collection dairy items such as milking machines, cream separators, milk stools, cow and calf items, bull leads and blinders, milk bottles, and other items should contact Herb Wessel, Hamstead, Md., (410) 374-2273.
