N.Y. Farm Bureau Adds Staff

ALBANY, N.Y.—New York Farm Bureau recently announced it hired Kyle A. Stewart as its new assistant director of governmental relations.

Stewart, a recent graduate of The College of Saint Rose, was raised on his father's dairy farm in Washington County. At Saint Rose, Kyle majored in political science, interned for New York State Assemblyman Joseph D. Morelle and graduated in May of 1995.

Prior to coming to New York Farm Bureau, Kyle worked for Empire Blue Cross Blue Shield as a claims examiner.

"I have always wanted to work at Farm Bureau," Stewart said. "By growing up on a farm and studying political science at Saint Rose, it has always seemed to me that Farm Bureau would be the most logical and best place for me to work. Farm Bureau has a great reputation in the agricultural and political communities. I am excited by the prospect that I will be able to help effectuate positive change for the entire agricultural community."

Rick Zimmerman, the director of governmental relations and Kyle's supervisor, said, "Kyle is a welcome addition to the governmental relations staff here at New York Farm Bureau. His upbringing provides hands-on experience and knowledge relative to the many issues we deal with on a regular basis. In addition, his internship with Assemblyman Morelle has introduced him to the legislative process and the important role lobbying plays in that arena. We expect Kyle to be a major contributor toward achieving our overall goals."

Kyle is the son of Clifford and Janet Stewart of Greenwich. He currently resides in Niskayuna and is engaged to Shawn Jacko of Hauppauge, New York.
