Cattlemen Should Adopt A School

PEACH BOTTOM (Lancaster Co.) --- Cattlemen have the opportunity to educate children throughout their communities and beyond.

Each year beef producers nationwide volunteer their time to educate elementary school children about the importance of the beef industry by conducting farm tours, in-school presentations, and distributing educational materials.

The Pennsylvania Beef Council invites you as a producer to join in the efforts of educating our future beef consumers.

Simply adopt your local elementary school by sharing the many educational kits offered by the PA Beef Council with the teachers of your school. The kits have been developed to meet the requirements of several curriculum areas such as science, social studies, reading and many more.

You can help teachers receive these kits absolutely free! This is a win-win situation! Teachers receive valuable teaching materials and students learn the importance of beef in the diet as well as gain an appreciation for the beef industry.

For more information contact Gary Smith, director of the Southeast Regional Cattlemen's Association at (610) 363-6110 or Tammy Weaver of the Pennsylvania Beef Council at (800) 572-2020.
