

All the Dairy of Distinction winners get together for a large family photograph on the barn hill at Ag Progress Days. The farm beautification program honored 35 farms this year in Pennsylvania to bring the 10-year total to over 600 farms so honored.

Dairy Of Distinction Winners Meet

EVERETT NEWSWANGER Managing Editor

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) ---Farm family winners in the Dairy of Distinction program for Pennsylvania met Tuesday afternoon at Ag Progress Days. A short honors program was held and everyone had a chance to visit with other dairy farmers from many different counties.

As usual, a large color portrait of each farm was on display. These photographs are taken by the local committee and the large prints are supplied by Lancaster Farming.

Rebecca Sonnen, MAMA representative, was the guest speaker. She said that everyone in the dairy industry realizes the importance of the appearance of our farms. But Dairy of Distinction winners have taken this a step further by making attractive farms a priority. This directly promotes the dairy industry.

"We have a product that is so versatile that it is accepted by all ages, including children, young adults, teenagers and senior citizens," Sonnen said. "Milk is something that can be promoted in the schools without any negative input from teachers or administrators or parents.

"It's a challenge to keep a farm looking beautiful. There is always something happening to distract. But these winners have learned how to manage to overcome challenges and keep the farm beautiful. Much of the public is unaware of the ability and efficiency of the dairy farmer and the dairy industry. The Dairy of Distinction program enhances consumer confidence and credibility of the dairy industry.
