

High Ser

13 1997

PENNSYLVANIA STATE UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

056034 270730
PERIODICALS DIVISION
PENN STATE UNIVERSITY
W207 PATIE LIBRARY
UNTV PARK PA 16802

Lancaster Farming

Vol. 42 No. 48 4 Sections Lancaster Farming, Saturday, October 4, 1997 $28.50 Per Year 60¢ Per Copy

Mount Joy Dairy Farmers Meet With Officials At Local Kemps Plant

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor
MOUNT JOY/LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) - As milk markets changed for local dairymen, new opportunities for partnership emerged. That was the focus of a meeting Tuesday noon when the farmer directors of Mount Joy Milk Cooperative met with officials of Dairylea Cooperative and officials of Crowley Foods at their Kemps Foods fluid milk/manufacturing plant east of Lancaster. For the last month, Mount Joy milk has been received at Kemps. And apparently the start-up of this new partnership on September 1 has gone well. Everyone who spoke at the meeting that preceded the tour of the plant expressed admiration for all the other players. Using such phrases as "a moment in history," "supporting each other," and "quality, honesty, and sincerity," Clyde Rutherford, president of Dairylea, said he was

(Turn to Page A29)

Directors of the Mount Joy Farmers Cooperative met with officials of Dairylea Cooperative and Crowley Foods, Inc., on Tuesday, for a tour of the Kemps Foods plant east of Lancaster. In the photo from left, Teresa Webb, Clyde Rutherford, Earl Dehney, Don Risser, Bob Brandt, Ken Miller, Dale Hershey, Richard Groff, Gary Bensley, Diann Nosal, Ron Pasgo, and Rick Kovarik. Standing on truck, Ken Miller and Mike Brubaker. Photos by Everett Newswanger, managing editor.

From the left, state Sen. Roger Madigan receives a tractor mailbox from Earl Fink, president of the Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations in recognition of Madigan's long-time support of agriculture in the state. See story, page A23.

Dobrosky Honored At KILE Opening

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) - The opening of the Keystone International Livestock Exposition was held in the small arena of the Farm Show Complex Wednesday. Featured on the program was the presentation of the Hall of Fame honoree, the 4-H and FFA Pennsylvania Livestock Association (PLA) youth awards and a video presentation of the various sheep breeds to be shown. KILE this year is honoring the "Year of the Sheep." Tony Dobrosky, former York County extension agent and well-known for his work with youth, was inducted into the Hall of Fame, and his picture will join other famous people on the wall of the small arena. Serving a lifetime of support for the livestock industry, Dobrosky called his efforts with youth, especially the initiation of the junior livestock judging and stockman contests at KILE in the late '70's, as his most rewarding accomplishments. Dobrosky was

(Turn to Page A35)

Tony Dobrosky (left) receives the Hall of Fame award from Dennis Grumblin, Farm Show director.

Corn Growers Featured

In the next issue of Lancaster Farming (Oct. 11) we include Corn Talk, a special section dedicated to the corn grower. In cooperation with the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA), this newsletter is published three times per year. Look for an interview with the new PMCGA president, in addition to overviews of the growing year, controlling weeds in sweet corn, news of upcoming meetings, research information, and advertising messages.