

Will Your Farm Show Up In Census?

ANNAPOLIS, Md. - Is your farm going to show up in the 1997 Census of Agriculture? If you are an Emu raiser, keep alpacas, raise cut flowers, grow specialty fruits and vegetables, breed horses and so on, there is a high likelihood that you won't be counted because the census gurus don't know you exist, according to Tony Evans of the Maryland Department of Agriculture's marketing section. "However," he said, "you can get on the list by making a simple, toll free telephone call to the USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) at 1-800-675-0295. Your call will automatically be routed to the right state office which is handling the census for your state." Evans explains that NASS this year picked up the responsibility for doing the Ag Census from the Census Bureau and inherited most of its lists of who farms from the Census Bureau. "These lists don't fully reflect the great changes in agriculture in this region," he said. If you produce and sell $1,000 worth of ag products in a year, you should be counted. The ag census is done every five years and is the only detailed source of count-by-county ag information.
