

What's A Kid To Do?

Most kids like to climb on the tractors and inside the trucks on display.

Be certain to wear comfortable walking shoes—there's steps galore and more walking than you've ever done before if you go from event to event.

If you'd like to add a Farm Show flair to your wardrobe, you can purchase a cowboy hat and a pair of boots. Lots of other neat little gadgets are also for sale.

In the dairy barn, the booth at the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Promotion Services has games for kids to win cow erasers, stickers, and other goodies.

Tired?

If you're family's showing cows, you may want to snuggle up in the barns next to your favorite bovine animal and take a nap. Or, if you're like Natalie Buck from Berks County, you're spend the night in the hay.

Watch out Ashley, you just lost some of your cotton candy to your 10-month-old brother John. Stephanie, 3, finds it hilarious. The children's parents are Mark and Tammy Ktner, beef farmers from Dillsburg.

Amy Berdamler of Harrisburg is ready for takeoff at the NASA booth. An electronic still camera snapped pictures to take home of each child that climbed into the space suit.

More than farm animals are at the Farm Show. Here kids have an opportunity to learn about wildlife.
