Bureau Reminds New Yorkers That Farmers Produce Affordable Food

GLENMONT, N.Y. - The cost of food is so affordable in the United States that between January 1 and February 9 the average American has earned enough income to pay for their family's food bill for all of 1998. On Monday, February 9, Farm Bureau celebrated Food Check-Out Day by donating food to Albany's Ronald McDonald House.

According to Judi Whittaker, chairman of the New York Farm

Bureau state promotion and education committee, the donation will take place at noon at the Ronald McDonald's House's 139 South Lake Avenue, Albany, address. She said that the committee wanted to remind New Yorkers that state farmers continue to produce affordable food.

Whittaker added that the committee also will be making several monetary donations to the Albany Ronald McDonald House from a number of County Farm Bureaus.

"The Mission of Ronald McDonald House Charities is to help seriously ill children and their families," Whittaker said. "It's a home away from home, and we thought that we could assist them by donating the food we collected from across the state, from all of our county Farm Bureaus, while reminding people that the food farmers produce is not just excellent to eat, but it's affordable, too."
