

Lust To Lead National Sorghum Association

ABERNATHY, Texas — The National Grain Sorghum Producers board of directors has named Tim Lust as the interim executive director of the association.

Jack Eberspacher, who served as NGSP executive director for more than eight years, has resigned to become the executive director of the National Association of Wheat Growers.

"On behalf of the NGSP board of directors," said Kenny Tevis, NGSP president, "I want to wish Jack as much success in the future as he has brought to the sorghum industry in the past."

Eberspacher said that it was an honor to serve as the chief executive officer of the National Grain Sorghum Producers for the past eight and one-half years.

"The sorghum producers are headed in the right direction. There is great leadership on the board of directors and the staff," Eberspacher said, "I wish everyone the best."

Lust has served as director of marketing and research for the association for the past five years.

"Tim's knowledge, background and experience as director of marketing and research make him highly qualified to assume these new duties," Tevis said. "He has been involved with all of the issues that sorghum producers are facing today."

"His work in these areas ensures that the agenda and focus of representing the sorghum producer's interests and concerns continue to be the prime objective of the association. We look forward to working with him."
