ANSWER — A reader wanted to know how to relocate gladiolus bulbs that have already sprouted about 6 inches tall. Thanks to Margaret Strause, Leesport, and a Manheim reader who sent basically the same information. Do not dry off growing gladiolus. The do not grow from bulbs that get bigger every year, but from corms, which renew every year. At this time of the year, the plants are too young to have formed the new corms for next year's growth. Replant by having the new bed ready for them, including holes to plant them in. If the soil is very dry, fill the holes with water and allow it to drain away into the surrounding soil and then dig up the glads by keeping as much soil on the roots as possible to plant in a new bed.
