Finally, the big moment arrives and the court is formally introduced as a boy court member escorts a girl to the front of the stage at camp chapel.

Following a short program that includes handing out the awards and other recognitions, it is time for the big moment. All the studying for the test, the unrelenting nervousness of the impromptu question and a week of building excitement comes to a dizzying crescendo as Campbell tears open the envelope to announce the winners.

"And the winners are..."

For one boy and one girl, the dream has finally come true.

ARENDSVILLE (Adams Co.) — For a year Adams County 4-H members worked on projects to bring to the annual fair held Aug. 1 at the South Mountain Fairgrounds near Arendtsville.

And on this day the air was charged with anticipation as some 300 youngsters, from Carl Wilkinson, 12, of Aspers, who hobbled on crutches as he led his calf into competition, to Katie Baldwin, 10, of Biglerville, who was proud to show off her two-month-old Nubin/Alpine goat, took part in the event.

Carl broke his leg in a three-wheeler accident a week before the fair.

This year the youths benefited from the largest of 31 area businesses, which donated all of the items in the restaurant from food to paper products so that all of the money collected could be used for the 4-H Senate Exchange Program trip to Colorado next summer. Youths from Colorado visited the Adams County 4-H members this year.

While many youngsters took to the ring with butterflies in their stomachs there was one group who brought a smile to Carl Wilkinson, 12, of Aspers, found "the show must go on" as he hobbles into the show ring on crutches with his calf. Carl broke his leg one week before the Adams County 4-H Fair in a three-wheeler accident.
