

Dandyland Starbuck Maggy Supreme Of 35th PAADS

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A 4-year-old Holstein owned by Tom McCauley of Elizabethtown and Fred Strouse of Centre Hall late last week was named supreme champion of the 35th Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show (PAADS) at the state Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

The contest for supreme champion of PAADS is the climax for the several-day long dairy event. Only the grand champions of the six national and regional dairy breed shows held during the week at the Farm Show Complex are eligible.

The top prize that accompanies the title of supreme champion is $1,000. The total premiums for the PAADS shows totalled $78,000, and there were 1,425 entries in the six PAADS breed shows.

In selecting for the supreme champion, some drama is traditionally created. Each breed grand champion entered the Large Arena and circled while Harry Bachman of Annville announced the animal's name, owner, breed classification (correctness as judged by the breed registry organizations) and production information, as well as previous wins.

The equally traditional organ music and lighting effects were enhanced this year with a specially decorated Large Arena, in recognition of the event's 35th anniversary. In addition to the flags of the states and provinces of exhibitors, and curtains behind the showing management table and announcer podiums, off-white sashes were draped along the walls of the show ring, and potted flowers and ornamentals plants decorated the showing edges.

In addition to the six national/regional dairy breed shows, two state shows are held in conjunction with PAADS — the state junior dairy show and the state Holstein Fall Championship show.

The team of McCauley and Strouse, representing New Direction Holsteins in Elizabethtown, showed Maggy to win the Pennsylvania state Holstein Fall Championship earlier in the week, then showed her to win the grand championship of the Eastern National Holstein Show, held immediately prior to the selection for supreme.

The 4-year-old Duregal Astre Starbuck daughter has been on a winning streak, having started the year well by winning the grand championship of the state Holstein Spring Show at Harrisburg.

She followed up with a grand championship at the state regional South Central Championship Holstein Show, in August.

In addition to Tom McCauley and Strouse, New Direction Holsteins is also represented by Dr. Alan McCauley, Sandra McCauley, Kristen McCauley, and, depending on the animal, by some other partners.

On top of the other prizes earned during the week, New Direction Holsteins won the overall good housekeeping award; a competition based on three consecutive days of judging the exhibitor's show stall area and farm displays.

Judges looked at the cleanliness of animals and stalls, the attractiveness of the stall/exhibit area, and cleanliness and neatness of equipment, as well as courtesy to visitors and cooperation with show personnel.

The good housekeeping contest recognizes outstanding exhibit/stalls within each of the six breed shows, and then selects for an overall, or "supreme," champion.

In that way, New Direction Holsteins actually took home two "supreme" titles.

Eastern National Holstein Show

In the rest of the Eastern National Holstein Show, Robert and Mary Smith of Lady's Manor Farm in Maryland exhibited the reserve grand champion, also a 4-year-old, Lady's Manor Elly-Mae. The Smith's cow was also judged best bred and owned of the show.

The junior champion animal was a fall yearling, Tri-Day Ashlyn-ET, exhibited by Oseana Holsteins of Lumberport, West Virginia.

The reserve junior champion was a spring yearling, Rinehard Princess Ruth, shown by Jeena Rinehart of Taneytown, Md.

While the majority of dairy shows in Pennsylvania distinguish between milking-age (senior) and non-milking age (junior) animals, and select champions and reserve champions for each age group, some of the national-level breed shows at PAADS further subdivide the milking-age animals into senior aged and intermediate aged animals.

Intermediate-aged animals are 2-year-olds and 3-year-olds.

For the Eastern National Holsteins Show, Maple Lawn Farm of Fulton, Maryland, exhibited the intermediate champion, a senior 3-year-old, Medway Astre Mixie.

The reserve intermediate champion was also a senior 3-year-old, E-Ricks Stardust Taz, another champion exhibited by Tom McCauley and Fred Strouse.

In the youth division of the Eastern National Holsteins Show, Kevin Ehrhardt of Baldwin, Maryland, showed the grand champion, a 7-year-old, Ehrhardt's Astro Jody-ET.

Reserve grand champion was a junior 2-year-old, Greenwood Acres Encore Maria, shown by S. Brooks Kennedy, of Kennedyville, Maryland. Kennedy's reserve grand champion was the intermediate champion of the youth division.

The reserve intermediate champion of the youth division was a senior 2-year-old, Ernest-Anthony SD Tobi-ET, owned by Brandon Kling of Corantsville, Maryland.

The junior champion of the youth division was a fall calf, Tri-Day Princess Adeen-ET, owned by David Day of Tri-Day Holsteins in Shippensburg.

The reserve junior champion was a spring calf, Rinehard Mandel Vanessa, owned by Jeena Rinehart.

The premier breeder of the show was Penn Gate Farm of Littlestown, owned by Robert Gitt, and Steve and Christina Wood and sons Corbin and Clayton. They also won the dam and daughter class of the show as well as having the best three females.

The premier exhibitor of the show was Mark and David Campbell and Doug Beatty of Campbell-Run Farms in Ford City.

Eastern National Ayrshire Show

The grand champion of the Eastern National Ayrshire Show was a 7-year-old, Sunny Acres JJ Louise, owned by Kathryn Evans of Sunny Acres Farm in Georgetown New York, owned by Doug and

From the left, showing the supreme champion of the 35th Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show, Dandyland Starbuck Maggy, are leadsman James Burdette, an unidentified friend of the owners, co-owner Tom McCauley, co-owner Fred Strouse, Sandra McCauley, Mylln Good, state Dairy Princess Jennifer Dotterer, and state Farm Show Director Dennis Grumbine, who presents the banner. McCauley and Strouse represent New Direction Holsteins, which includes the others, except Burdette and Grumbine.

From the left, showing the six grand champions of the 35th Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show, are Mike Stiles with the Jersey, Douglas Evans with the Ayrshire, James Burdette with the Holstein, Christine Young with the Milking Shorthorn, a leadsman for GS Associates with the Brown Swiss, and Brett Dixon with the Guernsey.

Kathryn Evans.

The Evans were named premier breeder and exhibitor, and the grand champion, Louise, was named best bred and owned animal of the Ayrshire show.

Jeffrey and Michele Reasner of Jemi Ayrshires, in Shippensburg, showed the reserve grand champion Ayrshire, also an aged cow, Sunny Acres Misty Polly.

The Ayrshire show included the George Knight Jr. Total Performance Award, based on show placings and dairy production. The winner this year was New Vision Heligo Notorious, owned by New Vision Genetics of Milton, Vermont.

The junior champion of the open division was an intermediate calf, Rosayre Blitz, owned by D. Proctor, and Steve and Mary Woodis of Legacy Lane Farm, in Spencer, Massachusetts.

The reserve junior champion was a spring yearling, OES Prairies Tresor 2-ET, owned by Amy Woodis and Emily Paquette of Lone Birch Farm in North Brookfield, Massachusetts.

The intermediate champion was a senior 2-year-old, Bonnie Elms Super Janet 4, owned by Neil Kittle, of West Meadow Ayrshires, of Ontario, Canada.

The reserve intermediate champion was a junior 3-year-old, Sunnyfield BBK Presence, owned by David Patrick of Maple Dell Farm, in Woodbine, Md.

In the youth division, the grand champion was the intermediate champion, a senior 3-year-old,

Magic Meadows Jaye Jypsy, owned by Andrew Evans, of Sunny Acres Farm.

The reserve grand champion was the reserve intermediate champion, a junior 3-year-old, Covey-Palmyra Willy Rose-ET, owned by Michael Andrew Creek and B. Covery, of Palmyra Farm in Hagerstown, Maryland.

The senior champion of the youth division was a 4-year-old, Don-Sher Astro Anne, shown by Jason Stambaugh, of Triple J Ayrshires in East Berlin (Pa.).

The reserve senior champion was the second place 4-year-old, Palmyra Lincoln Ginger, owned by Mark Allen Creek, of Palmyra Farm in Hagerstown, Md.

The junior champion of the youth division was a winter yearling, Sunny Acres Bonnie Pandora, owned by Gregory Evans of Sunny Acres Farm.

The reserve junior champion was a junior calf, Covey Farms Olympic Reward, owned by Crystal Bozinski, of Wampum.

Eastern National Brown Swiss

In the open division of the Eastern National Brown Swiss show, the grand and senior champion was an aged cow, Long View Jades Raisin, owned by GS Associates, of New Windsor, Maryland.

The reserve grand champion was the reserve senior champion, the second-place aged cow, Campswiss Supreme Faith, owned by R. Martin, D. Beatty, and M. Campell of Campbell-Run Farms in Ford City.

The junior champion was a fall yearling, Top Acres Leverage Frebird, owned by Glad Ray Farm and Hills Hope Holsteins of Emmitsburg, Maryland.

The reserve junior champion was also a fall yearling, Burlin Jetway Rae-ET, owned by Erin Even Bural, of Burlin Farm, in New Windsor, Maryland.

Premier breeder and exhibitor was Robert and Joyce Wagner of Bo-Joy Farm in Quarryville.

The total performance winner was shown by George Smith III of Smith-Mead Farm, of Frederick, Maryland.

In the youth division the grand and senior champion was Meadow Hill Patrick Alaina, a junior 3-year-old, bred and owned by Alicia Ann Mase of Meadow Hill Farm in Lebanon (Pa.).

The reserve grand champion was Dochaven Jetway Mariah, a junior 2-year-old, owned by Katie McKissick of McKissick Farms, in New Castle.

Jacob Hushon, of Brothers Three Brown Swiss, in Delta, showed the junior champion of the youth division, a fall calf, Top Acres Jetway Wisp.

The reserve junior champion was a winter calf, Dublin Hills P Pineapple, owned by Aimee Smith of Dublin Hills Farm in Woodboro, Md.

(More PAADS Continued Next Week.)