FREDERICK, Md. — An aged cow was selected as the grand champion of the open class Holstein show here at the Frederick County Fair. C Melrosa Insp Delite, a 9-year-old cow exhibited by Hard-Rock Holsteins, Middletown, was the senior and grand champion of the show, held in the dairy showing at the Frederick fairgrounds in conjunction with the 136th annual Great Frederick Fair.

Judge for the event was Jason Myers of Windsor-Manor Farm, New Windsor. Judge Myers said that the cow's overall scale, her capacity, and the fact that her udder was still well above the hock and attached well at 9 years of age put her at the top of the Holstein show. "I really admire her dairyness and her balance. Her udder is outstanding. She's very correct in her feet and her legs; just a real well put-together individual," explained Mr. Myers.

Fresh in the middle of August, Delite had 138 pounds of milk per day on her last test, said Richard Kepler, one of her owners. The Hard-Rock prefix belongs to the trio of Kepler, Dave Lenhart, and Tom Mercuro. Mr. Kepler said Delite, housed in Hagerstown, in Washington County, was All-Maryland for 2 years and reserve All-Maryland last year.

The junior champion of the Holstein show was the top placed junior yearling Knob-View Encore Sue, exhibited by Heather Molesworth of Middletown. The Sue heifer is a Marcrest Encore daughter. Heather, the daughter of Marcia Kepler Molesworth, has been exhibiting dairy animals for three years. She has shown at the county and the state levels.

As in past years the Holstein show and the Guernsey show were held together in the showing. Classes in the two breeds alternated, culminating in the selection of grand champions of each breed.

The grand champion Guernsey was a Walnut Ridge Farm entry, Catoctin Perfect Buttercup. Five-year-old Buttercup, fresh in June, is milking a little over 75 pounds a day, according to Pam Hawker Moser, who led the big Guernsey around the showing. This was the first time the Hawker family of Middletown had shown this particular cow. They have been showing Guernseys since the 1950s, and are always a strong presence at Guernsey shows. This year the eight family members showed Guernseys, according to Mrs. Helen Hawker.

The junior champion of the Guernsey show was the first place senior yearling calf Anovadales Frank Happy. Happy is a homebred Spring Walk BT Frank daughter out of Anovadales Jakes Honey.
