National BueLingo Show, Convention Attracts Exhibitors From Many States

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio — The 12th Annual BueLingo Cattle Society Convention and Show was held last week here at the Hampton Inn.

Members attended from Ohio, Alberta, California, Arkansas, Texas, Idaho, Kansas, Indiana, and several other states.

The newly elected president is Jim Joiner of Anoka, Minn. The new vice president is Judy Brener from Apple River, Ill.

The BueLingo cattle breed is a medium-sized beef breed with a vertical white belt around the mid section. They have been performance tested extensively by Dr. Russell Danielson of North Dakota State University for 22 years. BueLingo are easy calving, give abundant milk and in body type appear similar to a black baldy. Although BueLingo color patterns are often identical to Belted Galloway, they do not have Galloway origin blood.

The BueLingo show was judged by well known Ohio State University cattle specialist Dr. Tom Turner. The grand champion senior BueLingo cow was "Ulta Meg" by Ultimate Circle owned and exhibited by Dickinson Cattle Company of Barnesville, Ohio. DCCI also showed the reserve grand champion bull, "Paparazzi," and reserve champion junior heifer 'Circle Progress."

The grand champion bull was 'JJ Field Trial" owned by Small Acres Farm of Loogootee, Ind. The grand champion all-age female was V-3 H&R Delite owned by Dr. Rowland Vernon Jr. of Fort Smith.

BueLingo cattle are becoming copular because of their large weaning weights in relation to cow body size and their unforgettable flamboyant belted color. Large and small farms are adding BueLingo genetics to their select herds. An appreciation for attractive and competitive club calves using BueLingo steers has increased their recent popularity.

The BueLingo year 2000 Show and Convention will be conducted in Fort Smith, Ark.
