Lancaster Chamber Announces 23rd Annual Agriculture Banquet

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce & Industry's Agriculture Committee will hold its 23rd Annual Agriculture-Industry Banquet Tuesday, November 23, 5:30 p.m., at the Lancaster Host Resort. The theme for this year's banquet is "A New Perspective."
 Max Armstrong, one of America's best-known and most widely followed agriculture journalists will be the keynote speaker. He has conducted daily broadcasts with colleague Orion Samuelson on Chicago's WGN AM Radio 720 for more than 20 years. The two also can be heard each day on roughly 500 radio stations through their Tribune Agri-Voice broadcasts, the Farming America radio show, and the National Farm Report programs.

 The banquet's master of ceremonies is John M. Blanchfield, manager of agriculture banking and rural development for the American Bankers Association, Washington, D.C.
 Over 600 agriculture industry leaders and farmers are expected to attend the dinner, which celebrates local and statewide agriculture. Special presentations will be made to the Century Farm Award and George C. Delp Ag Leadership Award recipients.

Sponsorships for the banquet are available and range from gold sponsor packages to banner sponsors. Individual tickets cost $40.
 Deadline to register is October 22. For more information on sponsorships or tickets, contact Brent Landis at 397-3531 ext. 62 or e-mail him at blandis@lcci.com.
