FORM 941 USING A
PERSONAL COMPUTER
AND A MODEM

Beginning April 1, IRS will be offering the opportunity for businesses to prepare and file their Form 941, "Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return," using a personal computer, modem, and off-the-shelf tax preparation software.

The tax return information will be transmitted to the IRS through a third party. This program provides another option for filing Form 941 electronically, which will save time and reduce paperwork. Additionally, it supports and enhances the IRS's initiative to expand the use of electronic filing options overall.

The 941 OLF program is available to businesses, software developers, and/or transmitters.

To file the Form 941, electronically, an application must be submitted as required by Revenue Procedure 97-47. Applicants must pay special attention to revenue procedure Section 9. In addition, applicants must obtain Publication 1855, "Technical Specification Guide for the Electronic Filing of Form 941, Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return." Applicants must agree to transmit an initial electronic transmission (known as a test file), which must be completed by the test file due date preceding the corresponding quarter's due date. The IRS will notify each applicant in writing regarding approval or denial of their application.

The 941 On-Line Filing (OLF) Program is easy and convenient.

Business filers must first apply for a personal identification number (PIN) by completing the letter of application (LOA) included in the software and file it electronically with the third party transmitter. The third party transmitter will receive the LOA from the business filer and electronically transmit the information to the Austin Service Center (AUSC). The business filer will then receive a PIN in the mail from the service. The PIN is used in lieu of the business filer's signature for the electronic return. Once they receive the PIN, participants can file Form 941 electronically.

For more information about the program, call the IRS e-file Help Desk Austin Service Center, (512) 460-8900. (This is not a toll-free number).
