LEBANON (Lebanon Co.)—Winter Roundup of the Lebanon County 4-H Livestock Club was held recently at the fairgrounds in Lebanon. The roundup is held each year to help members market the animals not going to the Pennsylvania Farm Show. Each member may tag up to four market lambs or hogs, but can only show one of each. This show and sale enables members to put more than one on feed and still have a market for extras.

The Roundup included 14 lambs and 47 market hogs, all of good quality, as judged by Wendell Landis of Lancaster County.
