FUTURES

III price was around $12.45 per cwt earlier in the summer.

The cheese market at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange remained relatively stable this week. Block prices traded between $1.28 and $1.2850 per pound. Barrel prices actually improved this week, rising from $1.06 per pound on Monday, August 14 to $1.09 by Friday, August 18. USDA reported that spot availability of cheese this week remains high. However, schools are opening soon and that will draw milk away from manufacturing uses. Also, milk buyers in the Southeast are importing increasing volumes of milk to fill their growing fluid demand.

Finally some good news. USDA announced this week they are going to adjust the purchase prices for butter and cheese under the dairy price support program. They are doing this to reflect changes in make allowances under federal order reform. As a result, the purchase price of cheese will rise 2.2 cents per pound, and the purchase price of butter will rise 18 cents.

Rotary, Penn State Team Up To Promote International Agriculture

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Rotary International and Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences are launching an innovative program to enhance agricultural productivity and alleviate hunger in Central and Eastern Europe and Central Asia.

The program kicked off during the Rotary International Agricultural Summit in conjunction with Penn State's Ag Progress Days exposition, Aug. 15-17.

The summit brought together Rotarians, government officials, and agricultural university representatives from Pennsylvania and the countries of Estonia, Kazakhstan, Lithuania, Russia, and the Ukraine for a series of meetings, tours, and workshops.

"This event will provide a model for collaborations that will enhance agricultural productivity in regions of the world where increased food production is badly needed," said John Rodgers, governor of Rotary District 7350, which hosted the international visitors. "Peace can begin when there is no hunger in the world."

In the months following the summit, Rotary clubs in central Pennsylvania, Maryland, and West Virginia will partner with clubs and universities overseas to develop collaborative projects that address agricultural needs in the emerging free-market economies of Europe and Central Asia. As part of its World Community Service Program, Rotary International will provide initial grants of $25,000 for the projects, which may last for up to three years. Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences will oversee the scientific and technical aspects of the program.

Robert Neff, president emeritus of Juniata College and visiting professor in Penn State's department of agricultural and extension education, is coordinating Penn State's participation in the project.

"This program is a unique opportunity for community-based service clubs — not government — to help solve global problems," Neff said. "Penn State's agricultural expertise and established connections in the participating countries make this an ideal partnership."

Keynote speakers at the summit were Frank Devlyn, president of Rotary International; Sam Hayes, Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture; and Robert Steele, dean of Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. Following the summit, the international visitors were scheduled to tour agricultural sites of local and national interest.

ROASTING ADDS VALUE TO FARM GRAINS

- ~ Gives a flavor to the grain that even most discriminating animals will enjoy
- ~ Molds are destroyed and toxins are greatly reduced to below tolerance levels.
- ~ Causes the grain to be thoroughly roasted inside the roaster for uniform treatment.
- ~ Your own grain is roasted, cooled and stored on your farm
