ANSWER — For the reader who wanted information on using goat milk to make soap and cheese, Michelle Good, Beavertown, recommends "Caprine Cooking" and "Goats Produce Too," by Mary Jane Toth, 2833 N. Lewis Rd., Coleman, MI 48618. Phone (517) 465-1982.

On soap making without animal fats, Michelle recommends "The Natural Soap Book," by Susan Miller Cavitch. Michelle uses the recipe for shampoo bars and her whole family loves them. Soap supplies are available from Rainbow Meadows 1-800-207-4047.

Here is a soap recipe Michelle uses.

Basic Goat Milk Soap

6 pounds lard

12-ounce can lye (Red Devil brand-be careful the new plastic containers contain more than 12 ounces)

2 cups goat milk (not cold)

3 cups cool water

Place the milk and water into a large stainless steel or enamel container (I do this outside) slowly stir in the lye, don't breathe the fumes

(I stir with a large rubber spatula, the lye will eat wooden spoons). The mixture gets very hot. Cool to 75 degrees. Warm the lard to 85 degrees. Very slowly pour warmed lard into lye mixture. Stir mixture until it reaches the consistency of honey or "traces," about 30 minutes. Add essential oils last.

Pour into molds greased with Vaseline. (I like to use plastic shoeboxes).

Carefully wrap soap in newspaper and several blankets to insulate. This helps the soap set up and cool slowly. When hard (24 hours) the soap should come out easily and cut in nice pieces with a knife. Age three weeks before

BEEF.

IT'S WHAT'S FOR DINNER.
