

Agriculture At The Core

Fair? "As long as there is a Bloomsburg Fair in existence, it will be an agriculture fair," Trump asserted.

The Bloomsburg Fair is especially geared to youthful exhibitors. The FFA and 4-H Clubs are featured along with youth shows in all exhibit disciplines. The Arts and Crafts, Educational, Horticultural, and Industrial exhibit buildings are packed with entries. Poultry and rabbits take their place with 4-H horse shows and riding demonstrations. Swine show achievement judging and dairy goat judging go with working border collies and the horse and pony drills.

Of course dairy cattle of all the major breeds get into the act along with beef and sheep. And a 4-H and FFA Livestock Sale cap the community's dedication to the area youth who participated in this year's Bloomsburg Fair. The Bloomsburg Fair ran from Sept. 23 to 30 this year and some of the results and reports of events will be available from the fair in later issues of Lancaster Farming.
