

'Post Protector' Offers Many Benefits

POTTSVILLE (Schuylkill Co.) — Post Protector prevents underground wooden posts, used in post frame construction, from rotting or being destroyed by insects.

Post Protector is made of top-quality polyethylene and is designed to be used on both pressure treated and glu-laminated posts.

Simply slip the Post Protector on the post prior to its insertion into the ground. The five-foot Post Protector allows for 4-feet below grade and one-foot above grade.

Another feature of Post Protector is integral uplift protection ribs. When the post hole is backfilled with concrete, the concrete will grab the ribs and provide uplift protection to ensure the post will not be pulled up by strong winds. The Protector and post are attached utilizing provided stainless steel lag screws and washers at four designated locations on the protector. The Protector also allows the post to breathe by virtue of its continuous ventilation system, which also aids in post life.

The product is available in a wide range of sizes to accommodate the most widely used pressure treated and glu-laminated posts.
