Russell Williams, president of the Hanover Shoe Farms Foundation was recognized for the Business "2001 Partner in 4-H" award. Williams was presented with a personalized Winross truck plaque.

Russell and the Shoe Farms Foundation have been strong supporters of the 4-H program in many ways. The main farm has been open for tours for inter-state exchange programs and international exchange programs. In addition the foundation has provided financial support to the program to provide scholarships to members who attend Overnight 4-H Camp, Leadership Conference, Inter-state Exchange; and funded 4-H ribbons and awards presented at 4-H Fair.

The 4-H Leaders Banquet included the annual meeting of 4-H Clubs of Adams County, Inc. Elected by the 4-H leaders to serve three-year director terms were: Natalie Bishop, Biglerville; Aimee Rohrbach, New Oxford; and Jane Ramsburg, Gettysburg. Gale Dubbs was appointed to the board for a three year term.

Dairy Commercials Target Hispanic Population

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — New commercials, billboards, and store promotions are just a few of the many promotional efforts The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. is doing to promote milk to New York and New Jersey's Hispanic population.

The Hispanic market is the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population, and Hispanics on average consume more milk per capita than other consumers. ADADC is targeting the New York City Metro area because it is second only to Los Angeles in terms of growth in the Hispanic population. Hispanics account for about 19 percent of the population in the Metro New York area.

"ADADC has been developing specialized advertising campaigns for the Hispanic population for more than 10 years," says Michele Martens, vice president of marketing for ADADC. "We were one of the first milk promotions group to recognize the importance of this population and are among only a handful to aggressively market to it."

This summer for example, ADADC not only reached the Hispanic population with store promotions and billboards, they are also running a commercial for milk-based smoothies on Hispanic television using the latest digital computer animation technology. The mixed fruit smoothie campaign is using a contemporary look with a cutting-edge twist under the "Leche Magica" or "The Magic of Milk" theme.
