ANSWER — Sadie Swaray, Myerstown, wanted instructions on year-round care for poinsettia and how to make it bloom during the Christmas season. Thanks to Richard Herring, Kennett Square, for sending the following information:

- Poinsettias need indirect sunlight at least six hours daily. Place a curtain of light shade between the sun and the plant if direct sunlight cannot be avoided. Temperatures should not exceed 70 degrees or fall below 55 degrees.

- Keep poinsettias away from heat and drafts as the soil must stay moderately moist. Water thoroughly when the soil feels dry to touch. Do not let the plant stand in water.

- After blooming, fertilize every two to three weeks with a balanced household fertilizer to maintain foliage.

- When the top-colored growth (bratts) lose their appeal, cut the plant back to about eight inches. Though stark in appearance, by May the plant will have new growth. By June 1, repot the plant. Use heavily organic soil. Place the plant outdoors when the weather is warm.

- The plant will begin producing flowers in the fall. Starting Oct. 1, be sure the poinsettia has a least four hours of total, continuous darkness each night and about six to eight hours of bright sunlight each day. The plant will not bloom properly without this strict regimen. Night time temperatures must not be below 60 degrees.
