Franklin County 4-H Tractor Club Awards
 The 4-H Tractor Club members and parents met for the 49th annual awards banquet at the Franklin County Career and Technology Center. The family style dinner was planned to recognize project club winners and to complete the annual winter program that involved 38 members. This was the last meeting in 2002.

Ben Cashell, club president, made an introduction and then Jere Wingert, program director, made a few comments. A ribbon was given to each member to determine how he or she did in their project book.

Dale Martin and Michael Slothour taught the first year group, and gave Elijah Hess, Greencastle, first place. Geoffery Martin, Chambersburg, was awarded second place, and Daniel Carbaugh, Waynesboro, was awarded third place.

Roger and Kevin Dice taught the second year group, and awarded Ben Cashell, Chambersburg, first place; James Zaiger, Waynesboro, second place, and Lamar Slothour, Chambersburg, third place.

Greg Leshar taught the third year group, and awarded Justin Slothour, Chambersburg, first place; Isaac Hess, Greencastle, second place; and Roy Hess, Waynesboro, third place.

Special thanks were given to Jere Wingert and the rest of the teachers for their time teaching the groups how a tractor works, and about tractor safety. Special thanks were given to the tractor dealers for the use of their facilities and refreshments they provided. One teach said, "You are a winner even if you don't get a prize and are a sport about it."
