Wyomissing (Berks Co.) — For the 19th time, members of the Berks County agriculture and agribusiness industry gathered to celebrate agriculture with awards and a presentation about the annual Farm-City exchange.

The Berks County Chamber of Commerce Farm-City Council

sponsored the Berks County Farm-City Banquet Thursday evening at the Sheraton Reading Hotel.

Dr. Robert and Helene Dreisbach were honored with one of two Public Relations in Agriculture awards. The Dreisbachs, Hamburg, have 115 registered Jersey animals on 120 acres. Dr. Dreisbach is doing small animal major effort to encourage more townships to develop effective agriculture preservation zoning.

Through the commission's Agriculture Zoning Incentive program, about 60,000 acres in 12 townships were designated effective agriculture preservation areas.

Phina Bodock won the Woman in Agriculture Award. Bodock is best known for her work as a county executive director of the Farm Service Agency (FSA).

Bodock started her FSA career as a program assistant and became county executive director in 1989. She will be retiring in a few months.

The Farm-City changes were Brendan Fehily, a news reporter for Channel 69 WFMZ for the past six months, and Mark Hoch, dairy farmer on the Hoch homestead.

Mark was given a tour of the Channel 69 station and helped

Trust Dinner Nov. 14

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster County has preserved more farms and acreage than any other county in the nation, more than 50,000.

This spirit of cooperation will be recognized during Lancaster Farmland Trust's annual dinner on Thursday, Nov. 14, at the Quality Inn and Suites, Oregon Pike in Lancaster.

A welcome reception and silent auction will begin at 5:45 p.m. with dinner at 6:30 p.m. The silent auction will again feature items produced on some of the Trust's preserved farms. All proceeds from the auction go toward helping to preserve farmland.

Fifteen farm families (a total of 18 farms) who have preserved their farms this year will be honored with land benefactor awards.

For more information, call (717) 293-0707.
