Dairy Team To Lead Cow Workshops

MYERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) and CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — The Capital Region Dairy Team, along with faculty from Penn State's department of veterinary science, will be offering two Cow Sense-Transition Cow workshops during November.

On Nov. 14, the workshop will take place in Lebanon County at the Curwin Weaver Farm near Myerstown. This operation has recently moved into a new dairy center.

On Nov. 15, the workshop will be conducted in Cumberland County at Cumminsville Farm on Walnut Bottom Rd. near Carlisle.

We all know how critical it is to catch a cow during the early stages of a disease rather than after she is really sick. Because of this, the ability of dairy farm workers to quickly identify problem cows is a critical part of all dairy management systems.

Those people who can quickly spot problem cows are often said to have "cow sense." Regional extension staff and veterinary science faculty have teamed up to create a hands-on, intensive course in "cow sense." Veterinarians and nutritionists will teach participants how to really read a cow's distress signals.

Skills that participants learn in this course can be put to work immediately on the farm. Participants will also receive a packet of information that will serve as a handy reference and can be used to help teach others.

Workshops will start at 9:30 a.m. and the program will end at 3 p.m. Lunch is provided. The cost is $25
