piece with description. Send to Treadway Auction Gallery, 2029 Madison Road, Cincinnati, OH 45208. Since they were mass produced there are still many of the more common examples around selling from $150 to $300.

Can you tell me anything about my 70 pieces of Carnival Glass in Marigold color? It includes sherbets, pitchers, cake plates.

A.L. - Taneytown, Md.

Carnival glass was mass produced first in America beginning in 1905 to the 1920s. Most common colors are Marigold, blue, purple and green. It was made by many companies and is a pressed glass coated with a sodium solution, then fired for a lustre look. Over the last 26 years it has been re-produced. To get an idea of the values invest in a Schroeders Antiques Price Guide or some of the books on the subject.

We recently inherited a large collection of glass clowns. A sticker on the bottom reads Murano, Italy. How can I sell them and what are they worth?

D.S. - Glenview, Ill.

The Venini Glassworks in Murano, Italy began making a series known as the commedia del Parte figures, that included clowns. They had paper labels and a variety of signatures and were made in the 1940s, 50s and 60s. Prices vary from the low hundreds to several thousand dollars. For the past decade Venini has been re-producing many of them. Best place to sell them would be the John Toomey Gallery in Oak Park, Ill. 818 N. Boulevard, 60301. Send good photos and descriptions.

I have twelve pieces of an aluminum coffee pot, sugar, creamer set with plates. All are marked "Continental hand wrought" with a picture of a soldier. Can you tell me anything about them and how to sell them?

S.K. - Springdale, Pa.

By the 1930s, 40s many companies were designing a variety of aluminum objects. Quality, maker name and design influence prices. Many were made and still show up at flea markets. Your coffee urn could sell in a shop for $60 or more.

The other pieces could fetch $25 and up.

This reclining figure of a male Indian is made out of a chalk substance and was given to my grandparents as a wedding gift in 1900. On the banner below his left hand is the word Ohio. Any information appreciated.

E.V.S. - Waverly, Neb.

Chalkware pieces made as carnival give-aways are most familiar.

However many were made as decorative ornaments and sold door to door by Italian immigrants. The best examples are considered as folk art and fetch fancy prices. Yours appears to be a fine example and could sell in a shop for $2,000 or more.
