Wolff Announces New Regional Directors For Agriculture

Co.) — Agriculture Secretary tion from Bucknell University. Dennis C Wolff announced the appointment of regional directors at the department's seven regional offices.

"I am confident that these individuals will do an excellent job of representing the Department of Agriculture to our regional constituencies," Wolff said. "Their diverse background, shared desire for public service, strong commitment to agriculture, and professional experience will be an asset to the department." Wolff noted the regional directors will help advance the two key agricultural aims of the administration, agricultural education and economic development, in addition to providing leadership to the regional offices.

New regional directors are:

- Region I Linda J. Field of Saegertown, a regional director with the department from 1987 to 1995. Field most recently served as manager of Meadville Market House. She has a background in the dairy industry and has an associate's degree in business administration from Edinboro University.
- Region II Paul "Hap" Schatz brings a diverse array of agricultural and public service experience to the Region II Office. Schatz owns and operates Lickrun Farm, a beef, hog and grain farm in Columbia County, and has worked as an aide to Congressman Paul Kanjorski since 1984. A former teacher, he

Farm Bureau Supports Dairy Herd Buyout Program

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) has announced support for the Cooperatives Working Together (CWT) program aimed at raising milk prices paid to dairymen. The general farm organization's board of directors adopted the position after hearing recommendations from PFB's dairy committee and several county Farm Bureaus.

Proposed by the National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF), the CWT program would use a producer assessment of 17.9 cents per hundredweight of milk for herd buyouts, export incentives and other targeted reductions in milk supplies. The program is expected to increase milk prices by an average of about $1.30 per hundredweight of milk if producers of at least 80 percent of the nation's milk supply are enrolled. NMPF officials have said the program won't be implemented unless the 80 percent level is

"With 70 percent of the naon's milk s ipply alread mitted to the program by participating cooperatives, independent dairy producers now hold the key to whether the program will move forward," said PFB Dairy Specialist Joel Rotz. "At least ten percent more of the milk supply has to be committed by independent dairy farmers during June before the program will be implemented, and Farm Bureau encourages their participation.

"To their credit, dairy farmers are working together to create a self-help program that doesn't rely on the government," said Pennsylvania Farm Bureau President Guy F. Donaldson. "It requires some initial investment by dairy farmers, but a good outcome will help reverse the worst economic situation for dairy farmers in twenty five years. The 80 percent participation threshold increases the chances for suc-

Farm Bureau also weighed the potential impact on the beef industry before deciding to support the CWT effort. "The herd buyout will total approximately 125,000 cows nationwide, which is only three-tenths of one percent of the national beef slaughter market. The impact on beef prices should be insignificant," Rotz said. "Because most of the buyouts will be in the western states, the impact in Pennsylvania will be even less.'

Farm Service Agency Accepts Reports

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) The Lancaster County Farm Service Agency (FSA) is accepting 2003 crop acreage reports. The deadlines, for reporting free of charge, are June 16 for small grains and July 15 for corn, soybeans, and all other crops.

Reports can still be accepted after these dates by paying a late fee of $35 per farm with an additional nominal charge for acre-

Crop reporting is a requirement for those farms enrolled in the Direct-Countercyclical Payment program (DCP), Loan Defi - ciency Payments (LDPs), and many other programs. FSA expects a heavy reporting season, so come prepared to know the location of your crops on the aerial maps or prepare your own map with the crop locations and acreages totaled. Aerial photos are available ahead of time, and also on the Mapquest Website, www.mapquest.com. This will save time at the county office.

The Lancaster County FSA office address is The Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Lancaster, PA 17601, (717) 397-6235

Holstein Judging School July 8-9

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The 2003 Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Judging School is Registration fast approaching. deadline is June 30.

The school is scheduled Tuesday, July 8-Wednesday, July 9, noon, at the Tioga County Holstein Club. Teacher is David Trotter, Enon Valley.

The school will be visiting two outstanding herds of cattle. Gor-Wood-D Holsteins and Moyer's Jerseys both have done well in the show ring while emphasizing outstanding production to go along with the type they have each developed. This will be an opportunity to work with two of the top herds in their respective breeds.

All youth regardless of breed orientation who are interested in learning about dairy cattle evaluation and reason giving are invited and encouraged to attend. The school offers at least 10 classes of animals to judge.

Cost of the school is $30 for those staying overnight. This includes school costs, hotel room, and evening meal. For those that commute, cost is $20, which covers school cost and the evening meal. This year, a second member of the same family who attends will receive a $5 discount off their registration fee.

For more information, contact the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, 839 Benner Pike, State College, PA 16801, Phone (814) 234-0364, www.paholsteins.com.
