UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Usually when an ordinary person retires, they get feted. Sometimes they get “roasted.” Many are simply part of a great big “bash.”

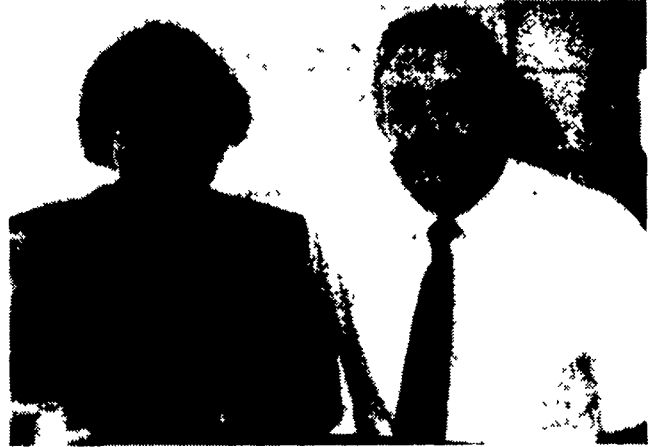

Actually, in this case, it was two bashes.

That just shows you how extraordinary this person is.

We’re talking about a dairy science expert that has stood at the forefront of grass-based dairy nutritional research.

Penn State loves Larry Muller so much they even named an ice cream for his accomplishments: because of his love of golf, they call this Penn State ice cream the “Muller Mulligan” (it’s a batch similar to your “cookie dough” flavors, but it has caramel and brownies in a vanilla base).

Recently, about 110 people attended what can only be described as a “bash” for Larry Muller, longtime Penn State dairy science instructor who is retiring. Muller’s Penn State colleagues and former
