ent colors of gold, all of which age differently. The quality of the 19th century gilded frames shows up in the thickness of the applied layers of gilding.

Recently popular are the chip carved, tramp art frames. Each is unique and has a charm all its own.

Keep in mind that in the early 20th century it was popular to put cheap, mass produced prints in beautiful frames. These days you may want to tell the seller to "keep the print. I'll take the frame."

There are reproductions of elaborate, early gilded frames. They can be as expensive as the real thing.

To learn more, read "Antique American Frames Identification and Price Guide" by Eli Wilner and Mervyn Kaufman, published by The Confident Collector, Avon books.
