

Red And White Fever

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Kenny Myers of Elizabethtown hosted a tour for a busload of dairy enthusiasts at the Red and White Dairy Cattle Association's National Convention in New Holland Aug. 1-2.

Myers manages a milking herd of 75 cows here on Myerose Farm. Three-fourths of them are Red and White, and all the black and white Holsteins in the herd carry the red factor gene.

Myers started building the Red and White herd in the early 1970s. His dad, Sam, had milked Guernseys on the farm prior to Kenny stepping into herd management.

Beside the increasing presence of the breed in the U.S., Kenny said there is a particularly strong demand for Red and Whites in Europe and South America.

Of his cow preferences, Myers said, "I like the good black ones if they have the red factor."

Myers's herd includes four Excellent cows and a number of Very Goods.

Convention-goers also toured Cyagra/Em Tran, and participated in numerous other activities, including a silent auction, awards banquet, and the annual meeting of the Red and White Dairy Cattle Association.
