Scholarship Committee Ready For Farm Show

"Our young people are really what is important to every one of us," said Tom Moyer, vice chairman of the youth scholarship committee.

Mover, supervisor of procurement logistics for Hatfield Quality Meats in Hatfield, is impressed with the quality of applicants this year. And those applicants can someday make a difference in the ag industry.

Moyer noted that last year, the committee presented a scholarship award to each student by

Last year, the committee awarded $2,000 scholarships to 24 Pennsylvania youth that are pursuing post-secondary education of the annual youth livestock sale in the Sales Arena on Tuesday, Jan. 13, at 9 a.m.

Since its inception in 1993, 154 individuals have received $235,500 from the foundation, money derived from membership in the foundation and public and private fund-raising efforts.

For the scholarship event, "I know what's in the bank account and it's pretty healthy," said Rudy. "Anybody can donate. We are a 5013C.

Gary Dean, Purina Mills development manager from Strasburg and scholarship board member, noted the committee is trying to get more donations and membership. Memberships are $30 for standard membership, $300 for Ambassador's Club, and $500 for corporations, though the foundation accepts donations in any increments for the fund.

A benefit dinner is scheduled Thursday, Jan. 29 at the downtown Hilton in Harrisburg. The scholarships will be presented there.

"The more ways we can generate interest in youth projects, the more scholarships we can provide and the higher they will be," said Dean.

A foundation breakfast will be conducted before the livestock sale. The sale and scholarship announcements are scheduled in the Sales (Small) Arena in the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg on Tuesday, Jan. 13.

According to Tom Moyer, committee chair, the committee reviews applications every year. The applications look at five different areas:

1. Academic information, including high school and college of choice.

2. 4-H and FFA involvement, in addition to community leadership.

3. Farm Show involvement, including contest participation. Interest in showing the four species, including swine, sheep, beef, and goats, is important.

4. Applicants must submit a narrative essay about their involvement in 4-H, FFA, and community work. They must describe the benefits and experience they have received from livestock projects. They must explain their contributions to the industry or society in general, and list their goals and aspirations.

5. Quality references. The applicants must have three people write reference letters. Those letters can come from ag instructors, teachers, pastors, or even siblings. "An older brother or sister can write about the candidate's involvement and what it means," according to Moyer.

The applications are reviewed early in December. This month, the committee met for two days in the boardroom at Capital Associates, Harrisburg.

Those involved include Fred Rudy, sale chairman; Paula Vitz, senior associate, Capital Associates, membership and funding chair; Mike Firestine, Fulton/ Lebanon Valley Bank, treasurer; Joan Grim, Sysco Foods, chair of the special events committee; Bill Henning, Penn State, chair of the show committee; Charles Itle, Farm Show (retired), secretary; Dennis Wolff, secretary of agriculture, foundation board chair; and Moyer, vice chair, foundation board.

"Our young people give back to the community," said Moyer. "If everybody did that, things would be just fine in this world."

Those who wish to be members or donate should contact Paula Vitz, Capital Associates, at (717) 234-5350.
