

WRECK OF THE SHIP NEW ERA.

Dreadful Loss of Life.

We published the fact yesterday that the Ship New Era, Capt. Henry, of Bath, Me., bound from Bremen to New York, with 380 passengers, was ashore near Deal, on the New Jersey coast. The following thrilling account of this frightful disaster we copy from the New York Herald:

The ship New Era was built by Messrs. Hitchcock & Co. during the present year. She was of 1928 tons burthen, and was valued at seventy thousand dollars. About the 22d of Sept. she sailed from the Fort of Bremen, under command of Capt. Henry, on her first voyage, for the port of New York, having a heavy insurance effected in Bath, Me., and Boston, with charges amounting to nearly six thousand dollars secured in Wall street. The emigrants were all Germans. After a somewhat tedious passage, the New Era came fully in sight of land about mid-day on Sunday, the 12th inst., and continuing her course in a dense fog, she ran ashore between Deal and Long Branch, during the same night.

At an early hour yesterday morning she was perceived lying with broadside to shore, with a heavy sea on, which was breaking over her, and washing her decks. At 12 o'clock, noon, there were perceptible signs of her breaking up. From the moment she was seen, every effort was made by the people on shore to save the passengers. Early in the afternoon they had succeeded in passing lines to the ship, and in a short time after Captain Henry, with twenty of the passengers, was landed in safety. From them it was learned that, before they left the vessel, over one hundred and fifty of the remaining passengers were dead, having been either smothered between the decks, drowned by the flow of water, (which was continually surging over them,) or been swept overboard.

Renewed exertions were made from the beach to save the balance of the people on board, but up to the moment of our last accounts, they were attended with very little success.

As the emigrants on board were all Germans, it is most likely that we shall never be able to find out the list of the names of the people who have been suddenly lost; and this fatal shipwreck will in all probability, have to be classed among the sorrowful reminiscences attending the loss of the Powhattan, on the same shore, when not even a human being was left to tell the tale of the calamity.

The New Era is aground on the Jersey shore, between Deal and Long Branch, about fifteen miles from Sandy Hook, and nearly thirty-five miles from New York. The beach is sandy, bleak, and at this season of the year very dangerous. Shrewsbury Inlet is on one side of the vessel, and Shark Inlet and the rugged beach of Squan on the other.

Accounts to seven o'clock last evening stated that several steam tugs were lying by the vessel, but they could not approach near enough to render any help, owing to the rough state of the weather. The ship was going to pieces.

Letter from Capt. Smith of the News Yatch of the Associated Press.

Near Long Branch, Nov. 13, 3 P. M.

About 8 o'clock, came in sight of the wreck lying broad-side to the beach, heading south, with fore, main, and mizen topsails close reefed still standing. On reaching her, she proved to be level with the water and full, and the swell breaking in heavy surges across her decks. We had already passed many pieces of the wreck, and half a mile on we saw the body of a little child, apparently about four or five years old, and quick succession also that of a man, striped of clothing, and others with clothes on—four or five bodies in all. As we approached the wreck, so as to get a nearer view, a most harrowing spectacle met the eyes.

The jib-boom, rigging and top of the ship, fore and aft, were filled with human beings closely packed together, and clinging to each other and to the ropes, while the ship surged to and fro with each returning wave, which broke into spray far into the rigging and over the ship, drenching and suffocating the passengers, while the poor creatures filled the air with the most soul-harrowing and pitiful outcries for assistance. On the beach were some two hundred persons, gathered in groups, apparently consulting as how to act, while others sat leisurely upon the gunwale of the boats, which the heavy surf rendered it certain destruction to launch.

We saw several boats upon the shore, apparently well adapted for the purpose; and a crowd of persons dragging a long life-boat towards the beach, where it was left, and no further attempt was made to launch it.

We saw no line from the ship to the shore, and no life-car. From the fact that what appeared the ship's boat was lying on the beach, we judged the officers and crew or most of them, must have landed or been thrown ashore in her. The tide was now at about its full—the wind had died away, and a light breeze sprung up from off shore, which greatly increased our hopes that the swell would go down with the tide, and render it possible for the boats to be launched from the shore. As to ourselves, we found we could do nothing.

Still hoping for a movement towards launching the boats from shore, we continued patient spectators of the scene, ringing our bell to encourage them, and beckoning to them on shore to launch the boats. When our wheels were put in motion to adjust the position of the steamer, the passengers, apparently fearing we were about to leave them, would rend the air with imploring cries, while others tolled the ship's bell, the sounds of which were borne to us as a-bove the wailings of the surf that swept over the ship.

We were near enough to distinctly see women holding their little ones with one hand, while the other, bleached by the spray, clung with a death grip to the railings on which they stood. On one or two in the mizzen rigging lay upon a belt. On the forecastle, there stood, a few moments ago, a group of four, clinging to the stay, but they are now gone—a heavy swell has probably swept them away.—Men have been seen to fall from the jibboom into the surf.

Thus we have looked on, unable to approach the ship. Capt. Reynolds twice hailed them on the shore, and asked them to launch the boats, as the surf, to us, seemed to be now sufficiently smooth to do so on the lee side of the ship. Finding that we could do nothing, and as the sun went down, seeing the boat hauled back upon the beach, we left to procure life boats, making signals to the wreck that we would return immediately. Meantime the Leviathan also arrived opposite the wreck, but, like ourselves, had no boats to render any assistance.

On our way up we soon met the Hector, having in tow a wrecking schooner, in charge of Captain Bowne, and with it we went back to the wreck. On reaching it, Capt. Bowne informed us that although he had boats, he had not two men who could pull an oar, and asking if any on board would go with him in the boat? I replied, "Here is one," and Mr. Hasckel volunteered to do the same.

Capt. Reynolds then informed Capt. Bowne that he could get men to man a life boat by coming alongside of the Achilles. We then made preparations to join Capt. Bowne, but to our surprise he pulled away from us toward the ship, leaving word for the Achilles to return to the city. Thus a large and powerful boat, with plenty of accommodations for the rescued passengers was sent to town, and the Hector, a comparatively slow and unsuitable boat is retained.

At 8 1/2 o'clock, when we left the wreck, the wind was blowing fresh from the westward, and it was thought would soon reduce the swell, but with the darkness to contend with, and short-handed, it must be impossible to take off the passengers—and many more must inevitably perish from exposure during the dreary darkness that has now closed over them.

ELIAS SMITH.

The Latest from the Wreck.

SEVEN o'clock, P. M.—The ship remains in the same position as before reported, broadside to the sea, which runs mountain high, and renders it impossible for the tug boats to render assistance. The sea is breaking over the wreck and before dark we could see every available space in the rigging filled with probably some two hundred persons. No less probably than seventy-five have already been washed overboard, and from present indications a great many more will be hurried into the sea before any effectual assistance can be rendered.

All the balls at the station were shot over the ship without being able to send a line on board from the shore, except in one case, when a life-boat was immediately sent out to the wreck, and Capt. Henry and eight or ten others got into it; but it was immediately capsized and turned completely over twice. Capt. Henry and four others clung to the boat and succeeded in reaching the shore. Unfortunately, at the time the life-boat capsized, the cable from the shore to the ship gave way, and there was then no remedy but to send to another station and procure more balls for the purpose of throwing another line over the wreck, and not an instant was lost in sending to the nearest life-boat station for this purpose.

The ship is a perfect wreck, and there is not the least hope of saving anything.

Should the heavy sea continue during the night it is scarcely possible that more than a very few of the passengers now on board or holding on to the rigging can be saved—and it is not at all improbable that every soul will be washed overboard before daylight.

All the passengers are Dutch and German, and as there is no one here who understands their language, we are not able to obtain from those who reached the shore any information in regard to the condition of things on board which undoubtedly is bad enough.

Captain Henry is active and energetic in efforts to extend his relief to his suffering passengers and crew.

The ship went on this morning at about 7 o'clock in a dense fog.

A later dispatch states that the ship was setting, and at eight o'clock was nearly level with the sea, which was then making a clean breach over her, and it was not thought possible that the passengers could hold on much longer.

A second line had been thrown from the shore across the deck of the ship, but the passengers and crew appear to have been too much exhausted to avail themselves of it, and when the last messenger left the scene of the disaster, the general opinion was that the ship must go to pieces very speedily, and in that case probably every soul on board would be lost.

Early yesterday afternoon, information reached this city that a large ship, name then unknown, was aground about four miles south of Long Branch, on the Jersey shore, near to Sandy Hook, and that she lay in a very dangerous position.

Towards one o'clock we learned that this vessel was the New Era, lately built in Bath, Me., which had sailed from Bremen, with three hundred and eighty passengers for New York.

At the moment that this information was forwarded us, all the passengers were on board.—They were crowding the deck, apparently in great terror and alarm; but it did not then appear from the shore that there would be any loss of life, much less a total shipwreck, although the sea at this time was very high, and no boat from shore—not even a steamer—could communicate with the ship.

Samuel Dunham, a soldier in the Revolutionary War, died at Mansfield, Ct., on the 12th inst., at the age of one hundred years and twenty days. He was the oldest Revolutionary Pensioner in the State, and possibly in the United States. His funeral took place on the day succeeding his death, and was largely attended. An appropriate discourse was delivered on the occasion from these words, "And all the days of Methuselah were nine hundred sixty and nine years; and he died." Mr. Dunham leaves two brothers, one of whom is ninety-five and the other ninety-seven years of age. Both of whom were soldiers of the revolution, and one of them, to the irreparable disgrace of the country, is now the inmate of the almshouse.

JOY FOR THE INVALID.—We cut the following from the Philadelphia Saturday Gazette, and recommend our readers to peruse it carefully, and those suffering should not delay purchasing:

DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.—This celebrated medicine, prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON, at the imposing German Medicine Store, No. 129 ARCH street, is exciting unprecedented public attention, and the proprietor, who is a scientific physician, is selling immense quantities of it. The virtues of this remedy are so fully set forth in the extended notice of it, to be seen in our advertising columns, that there is hardly any room left for us to speak of it. This much we may add—Of the long train of physical ills to which humanity is heir, there is none more distressing than general derangement of the digestive apparatus, which never fails to accompany a disordered state of the liver. Headache, piles, languor, faintness, a bilious tongue, a morbid breath, loss of appetite—in short, an insufferable wretchedness of existence, are its insupportable and life-wasting attendants. These diseases, which have baffled the skill of the ablest Doctors, have been radically cured by Hoofland's German Bitters.—See advertisement.

PALPATION OF THE HEART, Nervous Diseases, Liver Complaint, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Costiveness and Piles, are all relieved and cured in an incredible short space of time, by Carter's Spanish Mixture, the great tonic and purifier of the blood. It contains not a particle of Mercury, Opium, or any noxious drugs; is perfectly harmless, and has cured more than five hundred cases of disease.

We can only refer the reader to the certificates, a few of which may be found in another column, and all of which are detailed in full around the bottle. It is the greatest of all Spring and Fall Medicines, and possesses an influence over the blood truly remarkable. See advertisement.
