From Putnam's Magazine TWO LITTLE STARS.

Two little stars, at eventide, Rose in the azure, side by side, And 'unid the glittering orbs on high, Floated serenely through the sky. Then sparkled with a trembling ray, But lovingly pursued their way, Though others blazed, more brilliant far than they!

The night stole on-but, with it came A sweeping storm of mist and flame, Which hung with gloom the starry dome, And lashed the billows into foam, While like a phantom, stern and stark, Stretching its thin arm in the dark Thro' the wild chaos tossed my trembling bark!

The night wore on-the angry blast Had spent its fury and was past. And gentle zephyrs wooed to rest The troubled Ocean's heaving breast— When, far above, amid the blue, As one by one the clouds withdrew Those little loving stars came beaming thro'!

And on they went with rising force, Up to the zenith of their course, Till the Orient's rosy light, Melted the shadows of the night; And then, with undiminished ray, ill side by side they stole away, Lost in the glory of the coming day.

Thus, dearest, onward, side by side, Through youth, the spirit's eventide, Up to the night of Lie have we Humbly fulfilled out destiny— And though around the rich and great Are glittering stars of loftier state Contentedly we share our lower fate.

And thus, though storms may come and go, Shrouding with gloom the world below, Above the tumult, as we rise, In calm communion with the skies, Still be it ours, serenely bright, To bless the darkness of the night. Cheering the tempest toss'd with heavenly light'

And when at length, each end attained, The zenith of our course is gained— As side by side those stars withdrew, Still beaming with unbroken ray— As gentle may we glide away. In the effulgence of immortal day!
