Blest moments! tho' so brief they are , Their length we measure by a kiss4...

Our doom is strife, and toil, and woe-Let's seize such moments as they fly.

Not Prudence' care, nor Wisdom's lore, Can guard our weary way from pain; The thorns our fathers plucked before, 'Tis ours to pluck, and feel, again;

Then with the thorns, why not the rose? The thorns are thick, the roses few; Where thousands pierce, one flower grows And shall its perfame vainly woo?

Oh! no! the hand that formed the thorn, Ordained the flower to bloom thereby; And if mankind were "made to mourn,"

But unto each, whate'er his woes, Are given moments, blissful, brief-A blending of the thorn and rose, To heighten joy, nor lessen grief!

Thus, unto me a bliss is given-To see thee, hear thee, and be near; And earth has now far more of heaven,

And life far more to make it dear. Miscellaneons.

LOVE AND SYMPATHY-A SONNET. Tou're very elegant, my lofty lady,
And have indeed a most bewitching face,
Which only wants a little modest grace
To make you beautiful as Byron's "Haidee!"
A decent pride there's certainly no harm in;
The very best of us must still be human;
But though fine features charm us in a woman,
Beauty with modesty is twice as charming!

Reauty with modesty is twice as charming!

I knew a lady fairer, colder, purer,

Than any ice on Nova Zembla's side,

Who grew so ugly with o'erweening pride,

It took a regular small-pox to cure her!
