In such a condition of affairs, with a hostile would present a United front to the advancing may rely on this. nemy. And yet, contending factions [distract her counsels, and in their mad strife for ascendancy, destroy her efficiency. But we cannot believe that such a state of things is to continue. We cannot believe that men will be so blinded by a party zeal, as not to see that a common danger threatens all, which can only be averted by a union of our entire strength. The institutions of the South are placed in serious peril, her independence is assailed, and her subjugation determined fon. Retreat is impossible. We must face the danger when it comes. Surrender means destruction, and compromise is treason. In the Union the battle is to be fought, and that right quickly. It becomes then, the duty of every Southern man to rally to the defence of what he holds most dear, the institutions under which he was reared, and the Constitution which upholds them. Let past differences be overlooked, and present feuds be buried, and, in the presence of a common danger, let us be united in a common defence."

The following is an extract from the farewell address of Andrew Jackson ; words fitly spoken, and worthy of the consideration of very citizen at the present time : The citizens of every State should studiously avoid everthing calculated to wound the sensibility or offend the just pride of the people of other States; and they should frown upon any proceedings within their own borders likely to disturb the tranquility of their political brethren in other portions of the Union .--In a country so extensive as the United States, and with pursuits so varied, the internal regulations of the several States must frequently differ from one another in important particulars; and the difference is unavoidably increased by can colonies were originally planted : principles which had taken deep root in their social relations before the Revolution, and therefore, of became free and independent States. But each State has the unquestionable right to regulate its own internal concerns according to its own pleasure ; and while it does not must be the sole judge of the measures proper to secure the safety of its citizens and promote not, will inevitably give them birth. SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 13, 1860. My Dear Sir .- What I write for the papers s too apt to be set down to a desire for political effect, and, therefore, I drop you this private note that you may know the real condition of things at the South.

The result in Pennsylvania has electrified this whole section of the Union. The friends of an independent confederacy are jubilant. the Legislature, has not been made an issue in while the news has fallen as a Pall of Death on us, who through every trial, have stood by almost to a man, will vote to arm the State and the work of our fath ers and hoped for an era of peace. What is to come after it, God ona convention of the people of that State, within 1y knows; the idea of peace is utterly prepos terous. The more conservative men in the South are now for setting our houses in order,

Rest assured, that the men found busy in this work of discord are not worthy of your confidence, and deserve your strongest reprobation.

THE REASON WHY.

"We are for Douglas," says the Missouri Republican, "because we like the man. We are tor him because he is a Union man. We are for him because he has never breathed a sentiment hostile to the interests of the South, or of cause he has done more for the South, and the whole couptry, than any statesmen now living We are for him because he has the talent, the independence, the will to assert his opinions in every State, town and village of the Union, and the corrupt, worn out and dving politicians are against him, and because his election will bring into political life the young, the ardent, the talented, the brilliant men of the country, hitherto kept in check by the thumb screws of old fogy partisans, arrogating to themselves the right to dictate the political issues before the a party, and we do not intend to advocate any other man in this election. When he is elected, as we trust he may be in November, peace will be restored to the Union, for then everv one will be satisfied that we have a man at the head of public affairs, and one who will not be afraid or incapable of meeting any semergency in which he may be placed "

A GREEN HAND .- A'sailor, the other day, in describing his efforts to become nautical, said that just at the close of a dark night he was sent aloft to see if he could see a light. As he was no great favorite with the Lieutenant, he was not hailed for some hours.

"Aloft there !" was at length heard from the Lieutenant.

"Ay, ay, sir." "Do you see a light ?" "Yes, sir." "What light ?" "Daylight !"
