No person who contemplates purchasing a Sewing Machine for family or manufacturing purposes should fail to send for one of our Circulars, which contains cuts and full descriptions of the several styles, prices and samples of work, all of which we send by mail free. We claim to have the
BEST SEWING MACHINES IN THE WORLD
For either Family or Manufacturing Purposes. And all we ask is a fair trial. Read the following:
IMPORTANT FACTS.
FACT No. 1.—This Company being duly licensed, their Machines are protected against infringement of their rights.
FACT No. 2.—These Machines make the lock-stitch—like all other stitches—and use a little less than half as much thread and silk as the chain or loop-stitch machines.
FACT No. 3.—These Machines are better adapted than any other sewing-machines in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family. They will sew from one to twenty different kinds of fabric, without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. They will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even stout, hard leather, without changing the feed, needle, or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever. It is not such a machine best adapted to family use and best adapted to family use, why not for every variety of light sewing manufacture? We recommend our larger sizes.
FACT No. 4.—These Machines make the most elastic seam of any sewing-machine in use—a fact of very great importance in sewing elastic goods, or goods of any kind, or a bias.
FACT No. 5.—No Machine is more durable or more simple in its construction, or more easily understood. The reputation of these Machines wherever used will fully demonstrate each of the above facts.
FACT No. 6.—These Machines took the Highest Premium at the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia.
FACT No. 7.—These Machines took the Highest Premium at the New Jersey State Fair.
FACT No. 8.—These Machines took the Highest Medal at the American Institute, in the City of New York, together with the Highest Premium for fine Sewing-Machine Work.
FACT No. 9.—These Machines took both the Highest Premiums at the Mechanics' Fair, Utica.
FACT No. 10.—These Machines can do the same thing generally, whenever properly exhibited in competition with other first-class Sewing Machines. But we leave space for only one fact more—it is the most important fact of all.
FACT No. 11.—We warrant every Machine we sell to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in market, or money refunded.

Great National Bazaar of Intellect,
FOR AMERICAN HEARTS AND HOMES!
THE
A NEW YEAR WITH AN OLD FRIEND.
On New Year's Day, 1862, that world renowned and unrivaled gem of American journalism, the peerless New York Mercury, will enter upon its twenty-fourth year of the most brilliant career ever achieved by a paper. During the past year it has been the teacher, story-teller, mentor, and oracle of the noblest and most intelligent people of the continent—and from Quebec, in Canada, to Potosi, on the Gulf of Mexico. Young and old, rich and poor, have revelled in its enchanting stores of wisdom, romance, art, poetry, and genial humor and its praise is in their mouths as household words. "The noble patriot-soldier in his tent, too, has whiled away the tedious of camp life in the absorbing review of its finding in them a fascinating mental discipline known only to those who rally to the Banner-Chart of the Grand Army of American Intellect and Glory. In commemorating New Year, the proprietors of the New York Mercury can only say, that it shall be their aim to make their great journal of the year 1862, more brilliant and interesting than ever, in its concentration of all the world's grandest and most beautiful specialties in the realms of Romance, graceful Poetry, elegant and grand Prose, and sparkling Humor and Entertainment News—until, like love, it "rules the court, the camp, the bower," as it already rules the happy domestic fireside. The editorial tone and National departments of the New York Mercury will continue true to that holy spirit of patriotism which has made it a necessity of the people since the War began, and kept it in enthusiastic demand when other sheets were dying all around it for want of popular support. Already the largest literary journal in the world, and famous as the forum of a thousand brilliant literary repartees, its prominence for 1862 will be magnificently beyond all precedent. The most celebrated pens of this country and Europe have been secured in its service, at an outlay equal to the expense of any national government in the Old World; and its novelities, or continued stories for 1862, will be the most splendid triumphs of elegant Fiction ever published. To these, too, the magazine of the greatest of American artists, Mr. F. O. C. Dantley, will lend the aid of pictorial art.
Omnipotent, initiatory of the New Year, is an ep'ntional Romance, commencing in the New York Mercury of Saturday, January 4th, 1862, entitled

(FROM OFFICIAL HOSPITAL REPORTS.)
MAY 19, 1860.—Ellen S., et. 25, single, never was very strong. Two years ago she had an attack of acute rheumatism, from which she was confined to her bed for two weeks, and subsequently from a relapse for four more. She has been well since that till last Saturday; while engaged in house-cleaning she took cold, had pain in her back, but she had no decided chill. Two days later her ankles began to swell, which was followed by swelling of the knee joints and of the hands. She has now full pain in her shoulders, and her knuckles are very tender, red and painful both hands are affected, but the right is most so. This, too, is a case of acute rheumatism, or, as it is now fashionably called, rheumatic fever. It is a well marked typical case. We will carefully watch the case, and from time to time call your attention to the various symptoms which present themselves. My chief object in bringing her before you now, is to call your attention to a remedy which has recently been recommended in the treatment of rheumatism. I mean propylamine. Dr. Awnearius, of St. Peterburg, recommends it in the highest terms, having done great good in its use in 250 cases which came under his care. Various complimentary testimonials respecting it have appeared in our journals, and I propose therefore to give it another trial. I must confess I am always incredulous as to the worth of the new remedies, but in this case I am not; but this comes to us recommended so highly, that we are bound to give it a trial.
MAY 23, 1860.—I will now exhibit to you the patient for whom I prescribed Propylamine, and who was then laboring under an attack of acute rheumatism. She has steadily taken it in doses of three grains, every two hours, (intermitting it at night). The day after she took it, I found her much more comfortable, better than she expected to be for a week or more, judging from her other attacks. (The patient now walked into the room). The improvement has steadily progressed, and you cannot fail to notice a marked change in the appearance of her joints, which are now nearly of their natural size. This fact our experiment would have seemed very successful; but gentlemen, we must wait a little while before we can give a decided opinion as to what is to be the result.
Here is another patient who was placed on the use of the same medicine on Sunday last; she has long been suffering from chronic rheumatism, and I found her at that time with an acute attack supervening upon her chronic affection. Her wrists and knuckles were much swollen and tense. She took the cologne of propylamine in large grains every two hours, and you will perceive that the swelling of the joints has much diminished.
THREE DAYS LATER!
MAY 26, 1860.—This is the case of acute rheumatism treated with propylamine, the first of these to be given gratis. The patient is now in a state of great comfort, and is now taking three grains three times daily.
In this case it has seemed to be followed by very satisfactory results. The second case to which your attention was called at our last lecture, has also continued to do well. I will now bring you a very characteristic case of acute rheumatism, and the result be satisfactory. I think, as good judgment, we shall justly render our verdict in favor of propylamine.
It is a woman, et. 25, who was admitted a few days ago. She had occasional rheumatic pains, but not so as to keep her bed eight days ago. The pains began in her right knee, subsequently affected the left knee, and last, the joints of the upper extremities. These joints are all swollen tense and tender. Her tongue is coated with a white fur, and dry, though there has been much sweating. Her pulse is full and strong, and about 50. He has now used propylamine for twenty-four hours.
This gentleman is what may be called a strictly typical case of acute rheumatism. The patient was unable to get up, and this exposure is followed by a feeling of coldness, severe articular pain, beginning as it usually does, in the lower joints. There is fever and the profuse sweating, so generally attendant on acute rheumatism.
I did not bring the patient before you with the intention of giving you a lecture on all the points connected with rheumatism, but to again give a trial to the new remedy we are testing, and to exhibit to you this typical case, as I have called it, than which there could not be a larger opportunity for testing the medicine in question. We are therefore, avoiding the use of all other medicines, even anodynes, that there may be no misgivings as to which was the efficient remedy. You shall see to the case at a future clinic.

MAY 19, 1860.—Ellen S., et. 25, single, never was very strong. Two years ago she had an attack of acute rheumatism, from which she was confined to her bed for two weeks, and subsequently from a relapse for four more. She has been well since that till last Saturday; while engaged in house-cleaning she took cold, had pain in her back, but she had no decided chill. Two days later her ankles began to swell, which was followed by swelling of the knee joints and of the hands. She has now full pain in her shoulders, and her knuckles are very tender, red and painful both hands are affected, but the right is most so. This, too, is a case of acute rheumatism, or, as it is now fashionably called, rheumatic fever. It is a well marked typical case. We will carefully watch the case, and from time to time call your attention to the various symptoms which present themselves. My chief object in bringing her before you now, is to call your attention to a remedy which has recently been recommended in the treatment of rheumatism. I mean propylamine. Dr. Awnearius, of St. Peterburg, recommends it in the highest terms, having done great good in its use in 250 cases which came under his care. Various complimentary testimonials respecting it have appeared in our journals, and I propose therefore to give it another trial. I must confess I am always incredulous as to the worth of the new remedies, but in this case I am not; but this comes to us recommended so highly, that we are bound to give it a trial.
MAY 23, 1860.—I will now exhibit to you the patient for whom I prescribed Propylamine, and who was then laboring under an attack of acute rheumatism. She has steadily taken it in doses of three grains, every two hours, (intermitting it at night). The day after she took it, I found her much more comfortable, better than she expected to be for a week or more, judging from her other attacks. (The patient now walked into the room). The improvement has steadily progressed, and you cannot fail to notice a marked change in the appearance of her joints, which are now nearly of their natural size. This fact our experiment would have seemed very successful; but gentlemen, we must wait a little while before we can give a decided opinion as to what is to be the result.
Here is another patient who was placed on the use of the same medicine on Sunday last; she has long been suffering from chronic rheumatism, and I found her at that time with an acute attack supervening upon her chronic affection. Her wrists and knuckles were much swollen and tense. She took the cologne of propylamine in large grains every two hours, and you will perceive that the swelling of the joints has much diminished.
THREE DAYS LATER!
MAY 26, 1860.—This is the case of acute rheumatism treated with propylamine, the first of these to be given gratis. The patient is now in a state of great comfort, and is now taking three grains three times daily.
In this case it has seemed to be followed by very satisfactory results. The second case to which your attention was called at our last lecture, has also continued to do well. I will now bring you a very characteristic case of acute rheumatism, and the result be satisfactory. I think, as good judgment, we shall justly render our verdict in favor of propylamine.
It is a woman, et. 25, who was admitted a few days ago. She had occasional rheumatic pains, but not so as to keep her bed eight days ago. The pains began in her right knee, subsequently affected the left knee, and last, the joints of the upper extremities. These joints are all swollen tense and tender. Her tongue is coated with a white fur, and dry, though there has been much sweating. Her pulse is full and strong, and about 50. He has now used propylamine for twenty-four hours.
This gentleman is what may be called a strictly typical case of acute rheumatism. The patient was unable to get up, and this exposure is followed by a feeling of coldness, severe articular pain, beginning as it usually does, in the lower joints. There is fever and the profuse sweating, so generally attendant on acute rheumatism.
I did not bring the patient before you with the intention of giving you a lecture on all the points connected with rheumatism, but to again give a trial to the new remedy we are testing, and to exhibit to you this typical case, as I have called it, than which there could not be a larger opportunity for testing the medicine in question. We are therefore, avoiding the use of all other medicines, even anodynes, that there may be no misgivings as to which was the efficient remedy. You shall see to the case at a future clinic.
