The Spring Elections.

From every part of the state come joyful tidings of Democratic triumphs and Democratic gains! The people seem to have awaked at last to a knowledge of the importance of Democratic principles. The campaign of 1864 opens gloriously in the old Keystone. But the great battle is yet to be fought ! and it behooves the Demecrats to be on the alert for the nefarious schemes of the enemy. Let us organize-our enemies are in the field-they are awake to the importance of the crisis-and depend upon it they will not leave a stone unturned to accomplish their purposes. Heretofore the Democratic party has been organized and drilled for every fight; but of late it seems to have degenerated almost into a mere rabble. If we expect to accomplish eur purpose we must-adopt system-we must work according to a plan-we must have an organization that will effect our purpose. A party that is not organized can no more expect to triumph than an army without officers and laws to govern it. If our friends throughout the the Conscription Bill .- I had almost forgotten state and more especially in this county will permit us to advise them, we would say: let there be regular organizations in every district, and, even sub-districts of both the county and state. EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

No. 8. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, HARRISBURG, March 28, 1864.

DEAR GAZETTE: Neither branch of the Legislature has been in session since Wednesday last, both houses having adjourned until this evening, in order to permit the members and senators to attend the Democratic State Convention held in Philadelphia, on Thursday last. Apropos of the Domocratic Convention, I would just say that it was very largely attended and that its proceedings were harmonious and characterized by genuine patriotism. The Democracy of Pennsylvania are united and will go into the coming Presidential campaign with solid and defiant front. One universal sentiment pervades the party, viz: that Democratic success at the ballot-box alone can save the republic from utter and irretrievable ruin. Imbued with this feeling, conservative men of all shades of opinion, find a common attraction in the Democratic organization. Hence the prospect is bright, and the true friends of the Union gather hope and courage for the coming fight. There lacks but one thing to insure the triumph of the Democracy, and that is thorough, rigid, complete organization. The ranks are full, nay, overflowing, but drill and discipline are wanting. Great leaders to plan the campaign, we must have, and the exigency of the time will, doubtless, develop them. A platform on which all conservative men can stand, we must also have, and this, no doubt, will be given us by the National Convention. platform. Our political opponents succeded, last fall, through the perfection of the minutie of their party discipline. By the t horoughness of their drill, they were enabled to poll every legal vote they had and from thirty thousand to fifty thousand votes that were not legal. Such was the vantage-ground on which they fought, and, depend on it, the Democracy will not find them less advantageously placed when they becomes us to organize, and to do so at once. Let the good work begin just now. There is no use waiting for systems, or plans, from state, or National committees. These will reach us too late. Now is the accepted time. Carpe

Our Position and Duty.

Our position, as a political organization, should not be misunderstood by friend or foe. It is yet in the power of the Democracy to right the ship of State, save the country from utter ruin, and re-establish liberty on a republican basis. But to achieve this, requires faith in its possibilty; energy to work for its accomplishment; and patience to wait for the fruit .-'Faith, without works, is dead;" and work, without faith, is a weary toil. We are sorry to see some of our true, and heretofore hopeful, Democrats, sink into inertia, and indulge in despondency. We do not much wonder at it for there are discouragements everywhere.
