THE TWO HARVESTS.

Look forth on the harvest! the reaper is ready, And soon the brown sheaves will be bound by his arm;

But, behold, in the South a new harvest preparing! These thousands are moving o'er field and by flood,

Yes, gone is the husband, and gone is the lover, And gone like the past never more to return;

Yes, gone is the husband, and gone is the lover, And gone like the past never more to return;

Aye, down goes the flag in the shock of the battle, And down go the horse, the rider and all;

Oh, God! stay the reaper, and check the fierce ray, Roll back the dark clouds, let the load thunders cease;

Then Thy temples once more shall be opened in love, And never come forth, till called from above,

When Gabriel's last trumpet shall sound in the sky.

What these principles would mean in practice the convention clearly declared, general, when they put you upon them as their candidate for President.

And now, general, having discharged my duty imposed on us by the convention, we ask you will favor us with an early reply, signifying your acceptance of the nomination.

LETTER TO GENERAL FREMONT.

GENERAL: A convention of the people sitting at the city of Cleveland, in the State of Ohio,

The convention have appointed as their committee, with instructions to communicate to you the result of their deliberations, and to ask your acceptance of the nomination.

In discharging this duty the committee need hardly inform you, general, that the convention which has thus put you in nomination for the office of President,

The convention, true to its faith in the common brotherhood of men and of government by all the people for all the people,

That they do not cover specifically every point of the political faith of the radical democracy of the country, or do not define perhaps as sharply as they might have been made to do,

Your own high character for fidelity to the equal rights of all the people, and the signal proofs you have given to the world of the possession of the statesmanship and wisdom necessary to govern well and justly,

But the reaper sweeps on like the rush of the blast.

Oh, God! stay the reaper, and check the fierce ray, Roll back the dark clouds, let the load thunders cease;

Drive Thou the dark phantoms that haunt us away; Through the light of Thy glory bring us to peace.

Then Thy temples once more shall be opened in love, And never come forth, till called from above,

When Gabriel's last trumpet shall sound in the sky.

But the reaper sweeps on like the rush of the blast.

Oh, God! stay the reaper, and check the fierce ray, Roll back the dark clouds, let the load thunders cease;

may hear his clarion voice rallying them to victory and the salvation of the republic.

We are, general, very respectfully, your friends and servants, WORTHINGTON G. SNETHER,

GENERAL FREMONT'S ACCEPTANCE. GENTLEMEN: In answer to the letter, which I have had the honor to receive from you,

Very honorable, because in offering it to me, you act in the name of a great number of citizens, who seek above all things the good of their country,

Had Mr. Lincoln remained faithful to the principles he was elected to defend, no schism could have been created and no contest would have been possible.

If, as we have to believe, those guarantees for liberty which made the distinctive name and glory of our country are in truth inviolably sacred,

Today we live in the country the abuse of a military dictatorship without its unity of action and vigor of execution.

Against this disastrous condition of affairs, the Cleveland Convention was a protest.

The principles which form the basis of its platform have my unqualified and cordial approval, but I cannot so heartily concur in all the measures which you propose.

It is in fact, a question belonging to the people themselves to decide, and is a proper occasion for exercise of their original and sovereign authority.

As a war measure, in the beginning of a revolt, which might be quelled by prompt severity, I understand the policy of confiscation; but not as a final measure of reconstruction after the suppression of an insurrection.

The object of the war is to make permanently secure the peace and happiness of the whole country, and there was but a single element in the way of its attainment.

With this extinction of slavery the party divisions created by it have also disappeared.

And in the history of the country there has ever been a time when the American people, without regard to one or another of the political divisions, were called upon to give solemnly their voice in a matter which involved the safety of the United States, it is assuredly the present one.

If the convention at Baltimore will nominate any man whose past life justifies a well grounded confidence in his fidelity to our cardinal principles, there is no reason why there should be any division among the really patriotic men of the country.

My own decided preference is to aid in this way, and not to myself a candidate. But if Mr. Lincoln should be nominated, as I believe it would be fatal to the country to endorse a policy and renew a power, which has cost us the lives of thousands of men and needlessly put the country on the road to bankruptcy,

In this contingency, I accept the nomination at Cleveland, and as a preliminary step, I have resigned my commission in the army.

I am, gentlemen, Very respectfully and truly yours, J. C. FREMONT.

New-York, June 4, 1864. To Worthington G. Snether, of Maryland, Edward Gilbert, of New-York, Casper Butz, of Illinois, Charles E. Moss, of Missouri, N. P. Sawyer, of Pennsylvania, Committee.

LETTER TO GEN. COCHRANE. NEW-YORK, June 3.

GENERAL: The convention sitting at Cleveland, on the 31st ultimo, having unanimously nominated you as the candidate of the Radical Democracy for Vice-President of the U. S. on the ticket with John C. Fremont as their candidate for President, have deputed us as their committee to communicate to you the result of their deliberation, and to ask of you the acceptance of the nomination.

We need not tell you, general, of the radical character of that convention, for you were its worldly presiding officer; nor need we refer particularly to the resolutions which were adopted as the basis of the new political organization which the necessities of the times have called into being.

The war, general, has swept away all old party-ties, and he who is wise enough to appreciate this fact, and range himself on the side of his imperiled country, deserves the confidence of all patriots.

When the war broke out, you took the field against the common enemy, and led our brave soldiers to battle on many a hard-fought field, in which you showed yourself the true soldier.

Your fellow-citizens of New-York, general, without respect to party, generously remembered your devotion to the cause of the country and humanity, and at the last state election declared their confidence in you by choosing you to one of the highest offices in their gift.

In conclusion, general, the committee hope you will favor them with your early reply, accepting the nomination, in order that the radical democracy may fling to the breeze at once the invincible flag of freedom, union, and independence, and move upon the enemy's works without delay.

We are, general, respectfully, your friend and servants. WORTHINGTON G. SNETHER, of Maryland, chairman. EDWARD GILBERT, of New-York. CASPAR BUTZ, of Illinois. CHARLES E. MOSS, of Missouri. N. P. SAWYER, of Pennsylvania. Gen. John Cochrane, New-York.

NEW-YORK, June 4. GENTLEMEN: I have received your note informing me officially of my nomination by the radical Democracy at Cleveland, on the 31st ultimo, as their candidate for Vice-President of the United States, on the ticket with John C. Fremont for President.

I have been accustomed to regard simply as a duty performed what you are pleased to represent as personally meritorious, and to regret the physical disability which alone withheld me from the immediate scene of war.

I concur in the action and agree with the principles of the convention, where by its 12th resolution, the question of reconstruction is referred to the constitutional action of the people, it is wisely committed to them an issue peculiarly within the providence of the future, and not yet sufficiently emerged from war to warrant positive opinion.

While I have ever supposed confiscation and use of the property of an enemy in arms to be a laudable service of an established and essential rule of civilized war, I am pleased to serve that convention, when asserting the justice of the principle, intended to remit its exercise to the direction of the people, hereafter manifested through representatives in Congress when considering the paramount question of reconstruction.

I have the honor, gentlemen, to accept the nomination for Vice-President of the U. States, which you have tendered to me under the direction of the convention.

How to Dispose of Dead Animals. On almost every farm, one or more large animals—a horse, a cow, or a bullock—dies in the course of each year; and every farm loses pigs, calves or sheep in the same period.

The easiest and most profitable method of disposing of a carcass is, to cover it thickly with fresh soil, with which a portion of quicklime has been mixed.

DINNER TO THE RESERVES.—The entertainment of the Pennsylvania Reserves by our citizens yesterday was a complete success, and furnished another evidence of the patriotism, liberality and hospitality of the people of Harrisburg.
