An Excellent School.—During our peregrimations is the hist political cannot be anything our peregrimations is the hist political cannot be anyt we repaired to Mr. Fletcher's house, where we found upon a table in the sitting-room, a number of Latin books, works on the higher mathematics, and other school books indicating that some person of considerable education lodged in the house. We at once blamed the teacher of the school with all this show of learning, but on inquiry we found that the books belonged to Mr. Fletcher's sons who used them as textbooks in the school which was then taught at that place by a Mr. Vaughn. Mr. Fletcher informed us that quite a number of Mr. Vaughn's students had advanced to the study of the Classics, Algebra, &c. We learn that the school is, at present, taught by a young gentleman who keeps it up to its standard. It is really one of the best, (if not the very best), country schools in the county. Besides, what is very gratifying, is the fact that there isn't a single "Republican" voter in the whole school
